AS WAS THE PASTOR

Rev. Tyng, of the Episcopal church, was fishing one day when he was approached by a stranger, who asked:

"Are you the parson?"

"I am a clergyman," was the reply.

"Well, I'm glad I've found you," said the stranger. "I've got a mighty sick wife at home, and I'd like you to come and see her."

"I will go with pleasure," said Dr. Tyng, "but I am afraid I shall not be able to do her much good. I am not a physician."

"Oh, that's all right," said the stranger. "I'm a doctor myself."—Kansas City Star.

What an Answer.

"Is Cobb, Fortune's star handler, going to get as much out of a number of engines Lavish coins to him from girls who admire his style of beauty, from boys who study his style of batting and from interested "fans." If he attempted to answer them all his batting arm would soon be a wreck.

One morning in Chicago during the past season he was translating his mail. Two of the fifty odd communications before him he took out.

"This letter," he said, "is the only one that gets a rise out of me. I'm going to write to this old fellow."

He passed the letter to a friend, who read:

DEAR MANAGER COBB—Will you kindly tell me, as I expect to Madison Club, Please, are you a man from Missouri? Yours truly, A SUBSCRIBER.

—Popular Magazine.

The Wonder of It.

A thrasher who was "moving Ireland" in a small cart lowered the fruit driver for failing to point out a sight to a part of Dublin they had just passed.

"THERE'S A MILLIONAIRE."

A few yards further the cart came to a stop which almost threw the passenger out.

"Why did you stop so suddenly?" asked the man.

"Well, sir, there's a milestone," came the answer from Pat.

"But what is there strange about a milestone?" again questioned the eighteen.

"Shure," spoke out Pat, "sir ye see dats me two o' them together."—Philadelphia Times.

Must Rise One Better.

Friendship Chase Knox was a diplomat long before he became secretary of state. A good many years ago he and ex-President Harrison represented a group of big railroads in the middle west in an extremely important case, which they won. Two months later they met in New York.

"Well," said Harrison with some pride, "I charged those railroads $25,000—and got it."

"I congratulate you," said Knox quietly. "I charged them $125,000. I also got it."—New York Tribune.

Old High Finance.

Financial history is not exclusively a batch of recent years. At the Riggs National Bank in Washington, says the Popular Magazine, there is carefully guarded a proof of the foregoing assertion.

Regarding the great thrift in hard times which [illegible] Henry Clay, finding himself in need of money, went to his friend Riggs and asked for the loan of $500 on his personal note. He was told that, while his credit was perfectly good, it was the invariable rule of the bank to require an indorser.

The great statesman hurried up Daniel Webster and asked him to indorse the note.

"Will you, sir?" said Webster. "But I must write across myself. Why not make your note for $600, and you and I will each do it?"

This they did, and today the note is in the Riggs bank—signed:

Business Before Pleasure.

An Jersey street parent keeps not a set of ornaments for the mantelpiece nor of the bible, including a moral sermon and girdle, so that the good old woman in the land answered her son that to treat life as a business which does possibly thought upon it that of a quest. The element of modern enterprise at Copenhagen includes a number of shops one of which, [illegible] which were at one time used in Denmark.

KNOTS.

The health of the community is good at present.

Rain and hail, but very good crops considering bad weather and rotten farming.

Sugar making is the order of the day. E. F. McLaughlin made a sugar stirring for some of the young people, Saturday, and all present had a very enjoyable time.

Uncle Taylor Moore is able to do his hauling this winter. He is staying with Wm. Sharp at Edray and also have to feed his stock every day.

Mrs. Pinkie Kellison has been visiting at the home of Chas Kellison at Buckeye, for several days.

A. C. Barlow was at Yolk and Big Spring, last week on business. Mr. Barlow is a candidate for assessor in the Edray district. He is a son of Uncle Henry Barlow, and is a large real estate owner, and is a lover of thoroughbred stock and an extensive stock dealer. He is one of the heaviest taxpayers in the county, and will make an up-to-date assessor. He and Mr. McNeal and Mr. Warwick are all capable men of business transactions and we should remember them as our first choice at the primary.

A. N. Barlow of Warwick, was here on business Saturday.

E. F. McLaughlin was at Cloverlick on business recently.

Our telephone lineman, Mr. Knapp, has about recovered from a short sickness. Mr. Knapp has got our lines in good shape and we have good service.

Charley Barlow, of Edray, was visiting Sammy Barlow, Sunday.

C. L. Barlow, of Edray, was visiting friends in this part last Sunday.

A. C. Barlow has been awarded a diploma and is a graduate in dentistry and veterinary doctoring, and has been having good success in his practice.

We notice in last week's Republican News, in a letter from Onoto, that the Democrats ought to use the money and fill some mud holes. We dare say that the roads here are in better condition than they have been for several years. There is not a mud hole in this section that the writer could bury his little black dog and his second hand speeder in. He is like many others—hits the ties or goes thro' the fields.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Carter and Mr. and Mrs. George Auldridge were visiting at Charley Baxter's recently.

WANLESS

News of interest is as scarce as hay.

The ground hog came out and was captured by T. J. Cassell, some days ago.

Quite a crowd of people attended the closing exercises of Miss Rachel Cassell's school the 9th inst.

Miss Wanless' school has closed and she is now at home.

Miss Effie Wanless, who has been a student at Mountain State Business College since last March, expects to graduate and be at home soon.

Thomas Barnett and A. W. Tallman are on the sick list.

The health of the people generally has been better this winter than in years. The past summer the hottest and the winter the coldest, and feed the scarcest. Yet with all these extremes we must confess that goodness and mercy has followed us through all.

John Waugh made a flying trip through last Friday, shaking hands Mr. Waugh is an old acquaintance of ours, and will make a strong run for assessor. He will make a thorough canvass later.

The Republican News has not exaggerated a bit about the roads, mudholes, bridges, &c. It seems strange that the roads could go down so much in one year of Democratic administration.

DILLEYS MILL

Ruth Grace Fertig, daughter of A. B. Fertig, aged three years, six months and twenty-two days, passed quietly away March 10, 1911. She had been sick for nearly five months. She first contracted typhoid fever, and after an illness of over four months was getting along very well when she contracted pneumonia and only lived about five days. She endured great pain and suffering until God said enough, and called her home to be a bright and shining jewel in that celestial city where there is no more pain nor sorrow and where tears are left no more.

Joseph and Minnie Fertig who have typhoid fever, are getting along very well.

There is quite a lot of sickness in the neighborhood at present, but hope it will not result in anything serious.

Norman Fertig is at home for a couple of weeks on a vacation.

Thorny Creek school is about over, and we think it has been an entire success. The people have studied diligently and they reap the profits of their labor in the days to come.

A MIGHTY MEAN TRICK.

In Which the Green City Crow Peddler Plays a Mad Man.

Perkins Merrill Mix, clerk of the Allegheny county jail, the following story to illustrate the driving talent of the little black handsome, the hero of the occasion, of the small country boy and the common rooster.

"We had an old horse one summer a young man from the city who had a notion of being strong to a horse-trade. He had been told that if he were ever tackled he should say to it that his head and face were concealed, as the horse would size him face all out of shape and if lodged in his hair would act just what they were used.

"The way with us in the clover land one day, where the bees were swarming in clock. We were clobbering the bait, or piling it in small piles against an approaching rain, and were pretty close to the noise. As the city chap was picking along between piles the swarm came up the west of some of those 2000 black handsome, and they made for the youngster from town. Some one shouted, and the threatened storm made for a newly plied bobber of hay. In the west confusement most the hired out about dem were covered.

"But the bees didn't care about the hand and shoulders particularly. There was a wriggling mass, it looked alive and they went to it, and what they did to the exposed part of that city chap was a-plenty. A muffled yell from the interior of the dobber followed, and hay went scattering in all directions. The city chap arose to his feet madder than a wet hen.

"'I may be from the city and green,' he shouted, 'but I think it is a mighty mean trick to scare a fellow like that and then when he is trying to make himself safe stick him with a pitch-fork. I can lick the man who did it!'"—Indianapolis News.

One For Each Face.

A western politician had quite a reputation in his own town for successful duplicity. It was generally believed that his idea of party principles was to work and vote with the winning side. He once entered the store of a druggist who happened at the time to be opposed to him politically.

"I want a jar of face cream," he said.

"Be sanitary, Tom," replied the druggist. "Get two jars."—Success Magazine.

Why the Teacher Wept.

Every scholar was wearing his best clothes, and every face was beaming brightly. And the teacher's eyes watched grimly lest one small slip should spoil the record of her class, for it was the annual inspection, and the fierce looking man who called himself inspector was putting the pupils through their paces.

"Now, boys," he called, "I want you to tell me what is a blizzard."

Silence reigned.

"What is a blizzard?" demanded the ferocious one.

And still silence reigned.

The teacher glared at the top boy, then nodded to encourage him, and at last there came a look of pleading in her eyes. Almost she wept.

Slowly the top boy's hand went up.

"Yes?" snapped the inspector. "Go on. Tell me—what is a blizzard?"

"P-please, sir," stammered the youthful encyclopedia. "It's the—the inside of a hen?"—London Answers.

Thoroughly Inspected.

Goethe was an often intruded upon by the curious in his house in Weimar that one day, made impatient by the determination of an unknown Englishman to force an entrance, he suddenly ordered his servant to show him in. The Englishman entered. Goethe planted himself erect in the center of the room, his arms crossed, his eyes on the ceiling, motionless like a statue. Surprised for the moment, the stranger soon comprehended the situation, and, without being in the least disconcerted, he put on his glasses, walked slowly around Goethe, inspected him from head to foot and went out.

Finished the Test.

Apropos of motions on houses, a correspondent of the Westminster Gazette writes that a man in Scotland wished to have cut over the door of a new house the text, "My house shall be called a house of prayer." He left the workmen to carry out his wishes during his absence, and on his return his horror was great to find the quotation completed, "But ye have made it a den of thieves." "We had a wee thing mair room, ye see, so we just put in the end o' the verse," was the explanation given by the Edinburgh firm.

Mailed It All Right.

"Why did you try to mail your tabby to a fox store box? Don't you know there are regular boxes for tabbies?" he asked the tattooed chief. "Come," stuttered the dazed maid, "but it was for a lad in Engine 13." So the word was passed throughout the department, and when it came off duty were quarters and tattooed enough to furnish a fox coat to the whole house.—Buffalo Express.

Meanness of Conservation.

There is always a certain meanness in the argument of conservatism. Issued with a certain superiority in fact. It affirms because it feels its fingers clutch the fact, and it will not open its eyes to see a better fact. The vanity which conservatism is not to defend in the actual state of things, good and bad. The project of improvement is the best possible state of things.—Emerson.

When Oatmeal Was Carried.

When the cereal in a grocery store at Francis, N. H., was being cleaned out recently a cup of cooked oatmeal was found. The cup had probably been in the cellar for 10 years, but the contents were found to be in perfect condition. Oatmeal was carried like corn, peas and other vegetables some years ago, before the advent of the present day certainly ended by us both.

Awaking a Calamity.

An American woman traveling in England stopped one day at a little country town. Hearing with the rest the shouts of the town cad of the difficulty in getting away out of an experience she had had with a hansom.

"The last morning I was about here," she said, "a hansom in not behind ages very quickly. I say after me—three, four, five, six—and I pay very the fare of three that the driver, bowed, the while he didn't understand it at all.

"I have no fog for once [illegible] with egg all [illegible] on the tailor of me, and I want to a serious way.

"'Don't you mind me the white of the egg, sir?'

"'Surely not, my woman,' he answered. 'The yolk is the best, the white is the tailors. Would you have me make a tailor of myself?'"

Measure For Measure.

Give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.
Give of the kindness that all men crave
And your friends will be many and true.
Give love and love to your life will flow,
A strength in your utmost need.
Have faith and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.
Give truth and your gifts will be paid in kind,
And honor will honor meet,
And a smile that is given will surely find
A smile that is cast at your feet.

What the Type Said.

Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, was one of a group of newspaper men who during a convention of that fraternity were one afternoon talking of typographical errors. Said he: "While I've heard of a great many funny typographical breaks in my time, about the oddest and most humorous transposition of types that ever came to my observation was that in a New York paper some years ago. The paper used to print its shipping news on the same page with the obituaries. Imagine the glee with which its readers found the captions changed one morning, a long list of respectable names being set forth under the sensational head, 'Passed Through Hell Gate Yesterday.'"

Very Thoughtful of Him.

A young gentleman who lives somewhere west of Euclid village and a bit east of the square has always been noted for his good breeding, and, though as a college student he has sometimes been a trifle worse for late hours, he has never forgotten his code.

A few weeks ago he made a determined effort to enter a dwelling which he firmly believed to be his own. He was met at the door by an angry man in pajamas, who told him that he had made a grievous mistake and, furthermore, requested him not to make so much noise, because his fine householder's wife was very ill. Our friend made abject and ample apologies and departed. His own home ended him again, however, and in a few minutes he was knocking at the same door. The worried man in pajamas again descended.

"I told you before that this is no house!" he shouted angrily. "And I told you that my wife is ill. What do you mean by coming back here?"

"I remember perfectly what you told me about your sick house an' your own dear wife," answered the wayfarer solemnly, even tearfully. "And I couldn't sleep thinkin' about 'em. I came back to ask if they are better."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Scotch Consolation.

A story is told of a canny Scot who dealt in old horses, alternating his spells of labor with heavy sprees. During the period of depression which followed each overindulgence John habitually took to bed and there diligently studied the family Bible. During one of these fits of attempted reformation his condition prompted his wife to call in the Rev. Mr. Wallace, the parish minister, who at the time happened to be passing.

"Oh, Mainter Wallace, come in and see our John. He's vera bad."

"What's wrang wi' him?"

"He's feart to meet his Makker," said Mrs. John.

Quick as fire came the crushing reply:

"Humph! Tell'm he needna be feart for that. He'll never see'm."

A Lost Joke.

Mark Twain and Chauncey M. Depew once made a trip from Europe on the same liner. One evening after dinner it was suggested that the diners while away the early evening in speech-making. When Twain's turn arrived he arose and delivered a characteristic address. When the senator was called upon to speak, however, he made an evasion.

"It was understood," he said, "that Mr. Clemens and I should write out speeches and prepare in advance for just such an occasion as this; also that he should exchange manuscripts. We have done so, but I regret that I have mislaid Mr. Clemens' manuscript and that I have forgotten his speech."

The audience laughed heartily at the joke as Depew sat down.

While strolling about the deck the following morning Mark Twain was stopped by an Englishman, who said to him rather confidentially:

"I have always heard that Senator Depew was a remarkably clever fellow, but really what wretched taste of his it was you were compelled to recite last night."

Scandinavian Simplicity.

It was considered unmeet for the wife of a Scandinavian warrior to greet the bride in company and salutation; he always waited until the had bestowed her affections on another and was in her way to the marriage ceremony. Then, attending the faithful followers they put upon the wedding party and carried away the bride. It was much in favor of the practice that marriages were always celebrated at night.

any when some thirty years ago to get a handful of diamonds through the custom house.

A mountain county has a fascination peculiarly its own. The grave and the gay, the rich and the poor, the learned and the ignorant, good and bad. There are some people there who will never live one year more in every five. They are far more enjoyable than the people of the city. Hospitality among the women is universally acknowledged, and to this more than anything else do we owe our allegiance. The children that they bear are healthy and sound of mind.

There we were sojourning at a million dollar summer hotel. It was filled with fashionable people from all over the country. There we saw a sight that was enough to make a mountain bred man almost doubt his senses. Four richly attired females sat about a table, playing poker, smoking cigarettes and drinking highballs. Is it necessary to say that these were from the cities? Such conduct is not only impossible with mountain women, but when we told some ladies of our acquaintance, they refused to believe it.

If there is a single thing that city people have in the way of comforts and all that surrounds and embellishes civilized life, that cannot be found in a mountain county, we would like to know what it is for we will try anything at least once. We say Pocahontas county for that is the most mountainous of all the mountain counties in the eastern part of the United States. It is the place where the waters head.

We do think of one thing that we do not have and that is snails. We have not taken to eating them. But then we are far removed from a seaport and we understand that they come from France, and there are no snail boats to come in and where the snail eaters to gather. If there is any object in eating them to add to our respectability, we doubt we could get volunteers. One of our acquaintances claims to have tried snails but says he does not hanker after them.

If there is one thing that a mountain man is prone to do in the course of his travels, it is to put up at the best hotel that the town he is in affords. He will deprive his children of shoes to stop at an expensive hotel and tip the servants. He will pay so much for a bed that he cannot sleep for thinking about it. He is used to the comforts at home and he wants to use the agony of his travels in the low countries all he can.

And whether he stops at the Waldorf or the elegant Rutland House, he will get no better room, cleaner linen, or finer table than he would find as the guest of hundreds of his friends in his native county.

The cities surpass the country in educational advantages, yet the country people have so many other things in their favor that they come to readily overcome the handicap and to actually excel in education. Practically every man, woman and child reads in the country. If you want to talk to a man who knows what is going on in the world, you will find him in the farmer. He has his newspapers and he reads them deeply and understandingly. The city may have his other forms of amusement, principally cards. But the farmer reads and knows what is happening from one end of the country to the other. He has his mind made up as to the merits of every notable lawsuit and political happening. He is the most intelligent voter in the country today. He makes the best jurors. He is used to exercise his judgment, most of his commercial and business interest is controversial matters. His class life gives him a clear head.

If the country boy should show natural ability in educational matters he always has an opportunity to exhibit his knowledge by a college of university course, and it is from the country that our best soldiers and great men come. There is abundant reason for it. He has the right kind of a start. You will hear him in after life when he has arrived and is trying the various ways of discipline as a schoolmaster. "Well, I am glad I did not have to play cards until after I got through college," and so forth, and that is the whole secret.

We are not apologizing in this article or defending our own position. We had a piece to write, and had to rush for a text and found it in the much abused county of Cornell, where one of the smartest men we ever knew was born and raised. It may suggest itself to the reader that that is why he came away.

We know the penny a-liner. We know that his lines must have a bite in them or they would not be printed. Our own county had a similar experience of misrepresentation at the hands of city reporters.

We remember one in particular whose daily scroll about our beloved county was so highly colored that the oldest inhabitant could not recognize the town and county that he was writing about. We remember the large, able-bodied, two gallon jug of fire-water from whence his inspiration came, and our last sight of him on the wrong side of a jail door, addressing the prisoners there assembled in words of fire, and refusing to be rescued from his durance vile, and declaring that he would sue the county for untold wealth.

No matter what they say murder does not run in counties, though George Henry Lewes says: "Murder, like talent, seems occasionally, to run in families."

The middle aged and older Pocahontas people will readily recognize in the above picture the likeness of Col. Wm. H. Terrell, for many years a prominent attorney at the Huntersville bar. The picture is from a photograph found among the papers of the late J. T. Hogsett, of Millpoint, and very kindly loaned us by his son, S. L. Hogsett.

WM. H. TERRELL, ESQ.

For more than fifty years this gentlemen was one of the most prominent and influential persons in the legal and political history of Pocahontas county.

The first time I ever heard of him was in this wise: In the summer of 1836, when I was six years of age, there was a Sacramental meeting held in the Huntersville Court House. When the communicants were invited to occupy a place inside the Bar, my parents left me near the foot of the stairway leading to the gallery. Being overcome by drowsiness I would have fallen to the floor had it not been for a gentleman seated near me who kindly placed my head on his knee where I had a good long sleep, as communion services at that time were much longer than at present. My Mother told me that it was Lawyer Terrell who had taken care of me, and from that day to the present no one's name has been more familiar. Governor Letcher once told me, that in all his legal practice he had never met a tougher proposition at the bar than Lawyer Terrell, as prosecuting attorney. These two lawyers were of different political sentiments—Letcher, Democratic while Terrell was the bone and sinew of Bath and Pocahontas Whiggery.

In reference to his family the record is so very unique that one like it may not be found in the history of the war between the States.

Wm. Terrell, Jr., was a graduate of West Point, became a general in the Union army, and died in one of the battles fought in Kentucky.

James B. Terrell graduated a the Virginia Military Institute. He fell in battle near Malvern Hill while acting as brigadier general. For reasons not fully understood even yet, the troops he was leading fell into an ambuscade and was literally cut to pieces. His commission as General never reached him while alive.

His youngest son, Philip, died in the battle of Mosn's Farm, near New Market, believed by some a victim of reckless bravery. Col. Porterfield, who was in command of the first Confederate troops in West Virginia, is his son-in-law.

The writer of these notes has special reasons for cherishing the memory of Lawyer Terrell in virtue of the pleasant relations that ever existed between them. Some of the most pleasant recollections of the writer's life are associated with visits to the Terrell home. The site of this home is ideal, an eminence in the Greenbrier section of the Warm Springs valley overlooking the entire valley. Sometimes I would find him upon being sent for, in much depression and tearful agitation. "O my friend, everything around me reminds me of neglected duties," and then he would tell "the sad tale of his cares." At other times I would find him calm and pleasant, with a poem he wanted me to hear him read. It seems to me that I have never heard anyone read more impressively than he would at such times. Even now as I write I seem to see and hear him as he read, Gray's Elegy.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The ploughman homeward plods his weary way
And leaves the world to darkness and to me.

Another favorite was the pleasures of hope by Campbell,:

At summer eve when Heaven's eternal bow
Spans with bright arch the glittering hills below,
'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view,
And robes the mountain in its azure hue.

I have never heard any one recite more impressively what Moore says of the silent harp in Tara's halls.

Such is the tribute I would personally pay to the memory of one of the most remarkable and influential persons that ever lived and moved among our Pocahontas people.

O. G. Arbogast is conducting a singing school at the Kerr school house.

The Kerr school closed Friday with a football game in the afternoon between the school boys and Arbovale. The Arbovale team was composed of the following players: John Slaven, Will Riley, Luther Wooddell, Tommy Simmons, Granval and Floy Gillispie, Arthur and Cliff Rader, Lex and Jim Gregory and Glen Lambert. The school team: W. P. Starcher, Earl Wilfong, Clyde Gillispie, Mack Thompson, Fred Conrad, Julian Nottingham, Guy Grogg, Strickler Arbogast, Paul Thompson, Charles Hogue, and Forrest Thompson. Score: Kerr school 2 Arbovale 1.

Saturday morning W. P. Starcher, teacher of the Kerr school, and Miss Goldie Hill, one of his pupils for three years, started for Marlinton to be married. Missing the train, they were married at Hosterman by Rev. C. B. Collins. After visiting friends here they will go to housekeeping at Ripley, W. Va., where a position awaits Mr. Starcher in his father's store, known as the Starcher Hardware Company.

After the football game Friday W. P. Starcher tossed a pair of of old pants he had been playing in, aside near the school house. The next morning before leaving for Marlinton he was looking over his goods in the way of money he found missing one pocketbook containing $42.00. As he and his intended passed the school house, he suddenly remembered the discarded garments, and exclaimed, "I know now where that money is!" Sure enough, there it was, although it had been put there at 3 p. m. the evening before. Many people had been all around and over it. Mr. Starcher and Miss Hill took such luck as a good omen.

THE AUGUSTA COUNTY RECORDS

By Frederick J. Haskin, in the Wheeling News.

For a number of years genealogists have been discussing the value of a series of papers known as the Chalkley manuscripts, so called because they are copies made by Judge Lyman Chalkley, of Staunton, Virginia, of the old court house records of Augusta county at a period when the territory of several states was included in that county. The publication of these records, which will probably be concluded within the current year, is regarded by many as one of the most important genealogical achievements of the world. There is no single genealogical publication in existence in either Europe or America which contains information valuable to people in so many localities.

A genealogist known in Europe and America for his published works, divides the settlement of the original American states into three major divisions: the settlement of Jamestown, Virginia, by English Royalists; the settlement of New England by the Puritans; and the settlement of Augusta County by the Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, the first party of which came to America in 1727. Most of these people came from Ulster in North Ireland, where they had been encouraged to emigrate by James I of Scotland after that portion of Ireland had been devastated and almost depopulated by its long series of wars. Because of the numerous difficulties arising over land titles in Ireland, these people after a residence of a century or more in Ireland, began to emigrate to America in large numbers. Despite their residence in Ireland they had preserved their Scottish characteristics, as well as their religious principles, and their many sterling qualities made them a most important factor in the settlement of this country.

Almost without exception they had large families and from the first had scant affiliation with the English people who had settled eastern Virginia and who were supporters of the established church. These Scotch-Irish settlers pushed farther and farther west as they were able to drive the Indians before them and make for themselves homes where they could worship God as they chose.

Besides these Scotch-Irish who came in thousands between 1730 and 1750, Augusta county's early settlers included a considerable number of the Germans and Swiss who had first settled in Pennsylvania, but moved southward when it was decided that no more grants of Pennsylvania land should be made until the youngest son of the Penn family should attain his majority. The act establishing Augusta County was passed in 1738 and the county was organized in 1745 as a part of Virginia. Its population was made up almost exclusively of the Scotch-Irish settlers, with a few Pennsylvania Germans who became more numerous a number of years later. At this time the territory extended to Fort Pitt, by the Virginians then called Fort Dunmore, in Pennsylvania, where Pittsburgh now stands. It included most of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, part of Michigan and all of Kentucky, besides West Virginia, which did not become a seperate state until 1863.

Because of the varying statements regarding the value of these old documents to geneology, a brief statement as to their contents has been given out. They include every appointment to any kind of public office during this period, with every name that appears upon any paper, miscellaneous or otherwise. There are abstracts giving the essential points of every deed, every will and every land grant, with the reports of all commissions, tax lists, delinquent lists, marriages and marriage bonds, lists of French and Indian War and Revolutionary soldiers, pension declarations and many other subjects.

The material of these manuscripts were scattered for years in number of places more or less difficult of access, for there were a number of towns where courts were held in this large territory. The rich historical value of the Augusta county records is attested by the fact that the Carnegie Museum of Historical Research has published excerpts from them in a number of bulletins, including among them the records of deeds entered at Fort Dunmore, Pittsburg, in 1775 and 1776.

Judge Chalkley had the advantage of access to these old documents, which were so ill arranged that no one had any knowledge of their contents, and he spent years making a copy of them or a brief of the contents of those which were too voluminous to be given in full. Frequently he would find a long searched for will in a bundle of land grants or he would run across a long forgotten will folded in the deed of a property. The fact that so many of these old documents could not be located by genealogists has caused many to doubt their existence. Many old records, which have been believed to have been destroyed, have been identified and copied. Their publication this year will make it possible for thousands of individuals to connect the missing links of their family history more accurately than a professional genealogist could do it without them.

Take it a good word, my child. It comes from the Greek. In the Pacific where it means that if an object could not be approached by order of the king it was tabooed. This word is came to be used in this country. It was applied to spirits of intoxication. If a man's father had been long, talk about rum was tabooed in society. This year in both camps of the party, the subject of the tariff is tabooed. What is the tariff? Oh, you would not understand. I feel I can tell you this much, if it had not been for the tariff you could have had two new dresses this spring for a-el of cos. to run el n and play.

The Standard Oil Company of Indiana declared a dividend of 25% percent the other day. Something happened to the Standard Oil Company last year. We do not know what it was but it was something that was supposed to be bad at the time, but it does not seem to have affected it very much. It was like a course of much needed medical treatment. The Tobacco Trust also seems to be highly prosperous.

Actors appeared at Hillsville the other day and went through the farce of shooting up a court and raised more noise than the real battle for the moving picture machines. They are getting used to the petulant pop of the pistol down there.

The death of Editor Edward Kenna, of Charleston, is greatly to be regretted. He was a man of ability and the State loses a useful and valuable man. He was the son of the late Senator Kenna. "Heaven gives its favorites—early death."

county records is known to people in every state in the union, while there fall across has been a matter of amusement. Genealogists in the vicinity of Washington have made thousands of dollars in the last 25 years by going to the old court house at Staunton, Virginia, and asking what connections they could from the records at their command. There are thousands of connections however that could not be established because the right document could not be found and a great majority of these difficulties will be overcome by the publication of these old records.

Genealogists in England, Scotland and Germany frequently send for information from the Augusta county records. There are several prominent Scotch families branches of which were included among the immigrants who helped to settle this territory, whose descendants make frequent applications for information to settle some disputed point. Large fees have been charged by the genealogists for the time spent in the quest of this information and the publication of the records will cut off the revenues of a few by throwing open to the world the full use of the records themselves.

While the immigration from New England helped to populate the northern part of the states of the middle west, the great bulk of the western population of this country has been proved to have been derived from the original confines of old Augusta county. According to a recent investigation, more than fifty per cent of the congressmen and senators now in office are descendants from the early settlers of this district. The number of professional men of all classes who are of Augusta county stock is said to be in excess of those descended from the New England states.

The work of preparing these old records for public use was undertaken by Judge Chalkley not for money, but for the purpose of erecting a historical monument to his own name. All the transcripts were made with historical accuracy as well as a full legal knowledge. Some of the spelling is peculiar as judged by modern standards and in a few cases the spelling of proper names is called into question, but a little thought will enable the reader to understand that it was possible for a German clerk of the court to write "Swoliven" for Sullivan, and the original spelling is usually given, excepting cases of known error.

The records are arranged in chronological order, and it is asserted by genealogists who have examined the completed manuscripts that they are as free from error as it is possible for such a work to be. It will be published in three large volumes and an important feature will be the index which will include every name mentioned in any record, which will be especially helpful to amateur genealogists.

The cost of this publication amounts to over $5,000, but it has been undertaken by members of one of the most important women's patriotic organizations in the country.

With the increased interest in genealogy in all parts of the country comes the demand for more books of historic records in the genealogical departments of the public libraries which are being established in such numbers, and the need of more material regarding the antecedents of the families who settled in the middle west has been keenly felt. The books covering this section have been few and incomplete and it is believed that the publication of these full records will be a key to those already existing without in any sense duplicating their contents.

Aside from their genealogical value, these old records are full of interest to any one concerned with the life and customs of the early Americans. They tell of claims received from Indians by the payment of strings of beads or steel knives. Land grants were made for plots extending from "two black oaks west to a white oak and thence north 45 degrees to an elm tree and thence 170 poles east to a forked black oak."

Lesson V.—Second Quarter, For May 5, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke vi, 36-38, xvi, 19-31.—Memory Verses, Luke vi, 36, 37.—Golden Text, Luke vi, 31.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

These few verses in Luke vi are a part of His discourse in the presence of His disciples and a great multitude of people who came to hear Him and to be healed of their diseases as He came down from the mountain and stood in the plain. The teaching is somewhat similar to that in last week's lesson, but the poverty and hunger and weeping seem to be more literal physical conditions than in the Sermon on the Mount; also by contrast the riches and fullness and laughter of verses 24, 25. The contrast between the "now" and a future time is more fully set forth in the Luke xvi lesson, and the bright side of it is concisely stated in I Cor. viii, 12. "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known." As to literal poverty, we know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ—that, though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich (II Cor. viii, 9), and as we think of the Bethlehem manger, the Nazareth home and the hunger and thirst and homelessness of His life offtimes in His public ministry we may perhaps measure something of ordinary poverty, but who can tell the full meaning of the emptying, the service, the humility and obedience of Phil. ii, 7, 8, R. V.? The literally rich are often poor in spirit, meek and lowly at heart, while the literal poor are often proud and self centered. We must always remember that the Lord looketh on the heart and trieth the heart (I Sam. xvi, 7; Jer. xvii, 10). The "woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you" of verse 25 seems not to be a very popular verse in some quarters, for even preachers and evangelists have been known to hold back the truth on certain great topics so as to have the approval of men, a very prominent worker having recently said publicly that he almed never to hurt the feelings of his fellow ministers. How very different from Him who said, "I do always those things that please the Father," and also from the apostle whose principle was "not as pleasing men, but God, who trieth our hearts" (John viii, 29; Thess. ii, 4). Concerning the topic of our lesson, "Poverty and Riches," Luke abounds in records of rich men, as in xii, 16; xvi, 1; xviii, 23; xix, 2; xxi, 1. besides the rich man and Lazarus of the last part of our lesson. From these passages we note that a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth, and some would do well to ask themselves, "Then whose shall those things be?" Riches sometimes make it difficult for the owners to enter the kingdom, and yet Zaccheus, who was rich, did enter. Sometimes the gifts of the rich did not count as much in His sight as the gifts of the poor. We are simply stewards, whether intrusted with mysteries or money or other things, and we must give an account of our stewardship. We may so use that which is intrusted to us as to become rich toward God (Luke ii, 21), and those who have been helped by us to know the Lord will make greater by us the glory in His kingdom, while the Lord Himself will reward all His faithful ones at the resurrection of the just (Luke xiv, 14; Rev. xxii, 12). Our Luke xvi lesson study reads like a statement of facts, and there is no reason why it should be called a parable. It is the one occasion on which our Lord drew aside the veil and gave us to see the unseen realities after we leave these bodies, plainly teaching that for each one it will be happiness or torment, not the highest degree of bliss which will be the believer's portion only after the resurrection of the righteous nor the deepest woe which will be the unbeliever's portion after the judgment of the great white throne, but a conscious existence in bliss or woe, with no possibility of passing from one to the other. The reason of the rich man's condition after death was not because he had been rich, but from the last verse of the chapter it is evident that when on earth he had no use for Moses or the prophets. He was not a believer in the Scriptures, but evidently proud and self satisfied. After death he proved the reality of a place of torment and became anxious that his brethren should not reach the same destination. He pleaded that if one went from the dead they would believe, but was told that the writings of Moses and the prophets were all sufficient. We know from John xi and xii that another man named Lazarus did rise from the dead, but while some believed others sought to kill him again (John xii, 10, 11). Our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, by whom and for whom all things were created, knew the unseen realities as no one else did, and we may count on every word He said as being literally so. By His death for our sins and resurrection from the dead He has provided forgiveness of sins, eternal life, eternal redemption, a joint heirship with Himself for "whosoever will," and only those who receive Him are the truly rich for time and eternity (Prov. viii, 18; Rev. iii, 18). All others are poor indeed. Oh, the multitudes of rich poor people!

THURSDAY, MARCH 28 1912

Committees of political parties are supposed to exist some months before election, but some of them have not done anything. We have had some experience in this line. We have never seen one which passed with less friction than the meeting at Parkersburg on the 1st day of March or one that gave more satisfaction to the party as a whole, though there have been some dissenting voices. The committee met in a large assembly room and there was a large audience present from over the State. The only innovation presented to this meeting of the committee was the question of the Senatorial primary. Only one person outside of the committee showed any disposition to speak and he was given an opportunity, and he raised his objection to one member of the subcommittee appointed to devise ways and means of holding the primary. The only question debated was whether the primary should be called at this time or action deferred until the meeting of the State Convention, on July 16. There was some difference of opinion on this point at first, but it was suggested that the main object of the primary was to eliminate from the nominations of delegates and state senators the question of their personal preferences for United States senators, and that if action were deferred until July 16 that most of those officials would have been nominated, and that July 16th was too late to accomplish the good that this movement is for. When this was presented in this shape all opposition died away to the motion and the State Committee fixed the primary. It is a new thing in politics in this State, and it is a question whether the committee or the convention has a better right to the power, and the conclusion was reached that if the convention repealed the action of the committee that no harm would come of the committee's action. As the press of the State is universal in its recommendation of the plan, it is not to be presumed for a moment that the committee's work will be set aside. "If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well it were done quickly."

One paper has questioned the advisability of the action of the State Committee in holding the State convention at Huntington on the 16th day of July, having a preference for some other place. The editor of this paper probably does not know that there is no great rush any more for State conventions, and West Virginia has a hard time to get a welcome in the big towns of the State. They all want those conventions which can be held in an opera house or some other large building, but a State convention requires the construction of a special building called a wig-wam, and no matter how expensive to build one with lumber and labor high, the visiting delegates are always complaining about the rough seats and the heat of the pine board building. Parkersburg is the nearest place reached in the State, but it has become tired of building wig-wams. At the last meeting of the committee, Huntington was the only town which would undertake the work, and none of the other towns tried to get it. It should be stated however that if the other applications had been made for the convention, it would still have probably gone to Huntington as that city, the largest but one in the State, has not had a State convention for a great number of years.

We have a fishing story in town. Kanawha Creek, the largest tributary of the Greenbrier, enters the river here and as both sides are good fishing banks. The suckers are beginning to come out of the deeper pools of the river and are spawning the creek. Both sides of the still water at the mouth are lined with yagged dares fishing and the fish are coming in thick. It is not unusual for a fisherman to get a dozen or more good big suckers in a day's fishing. This is a sport that has grown up in the last few years so far as any general clearance is concerned. Formerly the water was not much sought for by fish fishermen. We have wondered if any of the trout which appear in the river in great numbers every year have hatched until the fishermen say, but we have been too polite to ask. This is an fair condition until after April 1st, at which time we expect to hear of some trout. According to C. P. Dize, it is not wrong to lie to a man who is not entitled to the truth.

Everybody is interested in All Fools' Day. We could very well do without this fool-ish custom but whether we like it or not we have to put up with it once a year. No satisfactory origin has been assigned for the custom. The one most permissible is to send an unsuspecting person on a bootless errand. In Scotland they call it "hunting a gowk." In France they call the victim an April-fish, poisson d'Avril. One legend says that this is the day that Noah sent forth the dove from the ark. The Romans held a feast to Venus on this day. The Hindoos have the festival of Holi, on the 31st day of March, which is celebrated to us celebrate the 1st of April. Practically the whole month was given up in Roman times to games and contests. The month itself is from the Greek and Latin, and means the opening month, as the opening of buds. Shakespeare remarked on the changable character of an April day:

Oh, how this spring of love resembleth,
The uncertain glory of an April day;
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.

The Roosevelt fervor has died down to a great extent. The people of North Dakota were so benighted not to know that they were for Roosevelt and voted for LaFollette. The Co'onel will have to learn those bitter lines: "Off with the old love, on with the new." People are wondering if the seven governors are not about as ill advised as the tailors of Threadneedle Street with their resolutions. The Colonel has passed by easy stages from his position not to accept the comination to a point where he is attacking the administration of the Republican party. He is off the reservation, for the time being, but he is already on his way back. No man has ever been so abused and reviled by his own party. He has always been our bete noir, and we take a melancholy interest in seeing so many of his own party now saying worse things about him than we ever dared. Editor Tilson has been congratulated on his decided stand for the regulars.

An unconfirmed rumor from China says that women have been granted the right to vote. One woman has been elected to Parliament. England has been set back twenty years by the window smashing for which the suffragettes are blamed. Glass costs too much money and the pretty dears are to do time for their impulsiveness. We do not know whether we are for Woman's Suffrage or not. We have not got our orders yet. We will let you know later after the spring house cleaning is done, and we find out what herself thinks about it. Whether it is a duty or a privilege. A favor or a burden to be imposed upon the woman. We may be late in declaring ourselves, but you bet, we will be in earnest when we do. Verbum sap.

As usual we are coming through the winter and all not lost. The farmers have dealt out the feed straw by straw and think they will bring the stock through to grass. Having bought so much grain and hay for the cattle, the family may not have so many luxuries for awhile and the merchants are saying that they are not selling as much to the farmers as they generally do. The good weather lately has brought many people to town. Friday was the first day that the grass showed any sign of life. The sun seemed to lift that day and hold a golf ball for the first time since away last fall. That was the day we saw the first plow in operation.

Champ Clark seems to be making some headway. Wilson, Harmon, Underwood, Marshall, Gaynor, Officeseek or any other good man will be acceptable to us. There is something else besides nomination to be fought for this year. If we had the power of choice we would make one after the Jeffersonian, but this is a task imposed on the members of the national convention. They must see to it, and oh there is Baltimore on the 1st June days and do this work. We know this is the way we feel about this and we are sure that in voicing it that we are stating the views of the average voter, to which class we belong.

Tahoe is a good word, sky child. It comes from the islands in the Pacific where it meant that if an object could not be approached by order of the king it was tabooed. Then when it came to be used in this country, it was applied to topics of conversation. If a man's father had been hung, talk about ropes was tabooed in society. This year in both camps of the party, the subject of the tariff is tabooed. What is the tariff? Oh, you would not understand, I fear. I can tell you this much, if it had not been for the tariff you could have had two new dresses this spring instead of one, so run al ng and play.

The Standard Oil Company of Indiana declared a dividend of 2000 percent the other day. Something happened to the Standard Oil Company last year. We do not know what it was but it was something that was supposed to be bad at the time, but it does not seem to have affected it very much. It was like a course of much needed medical treatment. THE AUGUSTA COUNTY RECORDS county records is known to people in every state in the union, while their full extent has been a matter of conjecture. Genealogists in the vicinity of Washington have made thousands of dollars in the last 25 years by going to the old court house at Staunton, Virginia, and making what connections they could from the records at their command. There are thousands of connections however that could not be established because the right document could not be located and a great majority of these difficulties will be overcome by the publication of these old records.

Genealogists in England, Scotland and Germany frequently send for information from the Augusta county records. There are several prominent Scotch families branches of which were included among the immigrants who helped to settle this territory, whose descendants make frequent applications for information to settle some disputed point. Large fees have been charged by the genealogists for the time spent in the quest of this information and the publication of the records will cut off the revenues of a few by throwing open to the world the full use of the records themselves.

While the immigration from New England helped to populate the northern part of the states of the middle west, the great bulk of the western population of this country has been proved to have been derived from the original confines of old Augusta county. According to a recent investigation, more than fifty per cent of the congressmen and senators now in office are descendants from the early settlers of this district. The number of professional men of all classes who are of Augusta county stock is said to be in excess of those descended from the New England states.

The work of preparing these old records for public use was undertaken by Judge Chalkley not for money, but for the purpose of erecting a historical monument to his own name. All the transcripts were made with historical accuracy as well as a full legal knowledge. Some of the spelling is peculiar as judged by modern standards and in a few cases the spelling of proper names is called into question, but a little thought will enable the reader to understand that it was possible for a German clerk of the court to write "Swoliven" for Sullivan, and the original spelling is usually given, excepting cases of known error.

The records are arranged in chronological order, and it is asserted by genealogists who have examined the completed manuscripts that they are as free from error as it is possible for such a work to be. It will be published in three large volumes and an important feature will be the index which will include every name mentioned in any record, which will be especially helpful to amateur genealogists.

The cost of this publication amounts to over $5,000, but it has been undertaken by members of one of the most important women's patriotic organizations in the country.

With the increased interest in genealogy in all parts of the country comes the demand for more books of historic records in the genealogical departments of the public libraries which are being established in such numbers, and the need of more material regarding the antecedents of the families who settled in the middle west has been keenly felt. The books covering this section have been few and incomplete and it is believed that the publication of these full records will be a key to those already existing without in any sense duplicating their contents.

Aside from their genealogical value, these old records are full of interest to any one concerned with the life and customs of the early Americans. They tell of claims secured from Indians by the payment of strings of beads or steel knives. Land grants were made for plots extending from "two black oaks west to a white oak and thence north 45 degrees to an elm tree and thence 176 poles east to a forked black oak."

LESSON V.—Second Quarter. For May 5, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xi, 37-41; xii, 13-21. Memory Verses, Luke xi, 39, 40. Golden Text, Luke xii, 15. Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

These two verses in Luke xi are a part of the discourse to the Pharisees of the disciples and a great multitude of people who came to hear Him and to be healed of their diseases as He came down from the mountains and stood in the plain. The teaching is somewhat similar to that in last week's lesson, but the poverty and hunger and weeping were to be more than offset by true conditions even in the heaven on the throne, also by realizing the riches and fullness and brightness of verses 34, 35. The contrast between verses 38, 39. The contrast between the "now" and a future time is more fully set forth in the Luke xvi lesson, and the bright side of it is constantly set in 1 Cor. xvi, 13. "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known." As to literal poverty, we know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich (2 Cor. viii, 9), and as we think of the Bethlehem manger, the Nazareth home and the hunger and thirst and homelessness of His life sufferings in His public ministry we may perhaps see something of ordinary poverty, but who can tell the full meaning of the emptying, the Phil. ii, 7; 2 Cor. v, 21. The literally rich are often poor in spirit, weak and lowly at heart, while the literal poor are often proud and self centered. We must always remember that the Lord looketh on the heart and trieth the heart (1 Sam. xvi, 7; Jer. xvii, 10). The "woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you" of verse 26 seems not to be a very popular verse in some quarters, for even preachers and evangelists have been known to hold back the truth on certain great topics so as to have the approval of men, a very prominent worker having recently said publicly that he should never to hurt the feelings of his fellow ministers. How very different from Him who said, "I do always those things that please the Father," and also from the apostle whose principle was "not as pleasing men, but God, who trieth our hearts" (John viii, 29; Thess. ii, 4). Concerning the topic of our lesson, "Poverty and Riches," Luke abounds in records of rich men, as in xii, 16; xvi, 1; xviii, 23; xix, 2; xxi, 1, besides the rich man and Lazarus of the last part of our lesson. From these passages we note that a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth, and some would do well to ask themselves, "Then whose shall those things be?" Riches sometimes make it difficult for the owners to enter the kingdom, and yet Zaccheus, who was rich, did enter. Sometimes the gifts of the rich did not count as much in His sight as the gifts of the poor. We are simply stewards, whether intrusted with mysteries or money or other things, and we must give an account of our stewardship. We may so use that which is intrusted to us as to become rich toward God (Luke ii, 23), and those who have been helped by us to know the Lord will make greater to us the glory in His kingdom, while the Lord Himself will reward all His faithful ones at the resurrection of the just (Luke xiv, 14; Rev. xxii, 12). Our Luke xvi lesson study reads like a statement of facts, and there is no reason why it should be called a parable. It is the one occasion on which our Lord drew aside the veil and gave us to see the unseen realities after we leave these bodies, plainly teaching that for each one it will be happiness or torment, not the highest degree of bliss which will be the believer's portion only after the resurrection of the righteous nor the deepest woe which will be the unbeliever's portion after the judgment of the great white throne, but a conscious existence in bliss or woe, with no possibility of passing from one to the other. The reason of the rich man's condition after death was not because he had been rich, but from the last verse of the chapter it is evident that when on earth he had no use for Moses or the prophets. He was not a believer in the Scriptures, but evidently proud and self satisfied. After death he proved the reality of a place of torment and became anxious that his brethren should not reach the same destination. He pleaded that if one went from the dead they would believe, but was told that the writings of Moses and the prophets were all sufficient. We know from John xi and xii that another man named Lazarus did rise from the dead, but while some believed others sought to kill him again (John xii, 10, 11). Our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, by whom and for whom all things were created, knew the unseen realities as no one else did, and we may count on every word He said as being literally so. By His death for our sins and resurrection from the dead He has provided forgiveness of sins, eternal life, eternal redemption, a joint heirship with Himself for "whosoever will," and only those who receive Him are the truly rich for time and eternity (Prov. viii, 18; Rev. iii, 18). All others are poor indeed. Oh, the multitudes of rich poor people!

Do Not Lose Your Temper.

Anger is a lack of sense. That is to say, a man is not as sensible when he is angry as he is at other times. He may be angry and still have more sense than some people have when they are not angry, but he is not as wise when he is angry as at other times. He cannot reason so well; his brain does not work in as sane a groove; he is more foolish than other people who may have much less sense than he has when he is in good humor.

Good Character.

The ideal man is one that possesses a good character in the full sense of the word. One that will not only be a good provider, but that will by acts of thoughtfulness appreciate the value of a good woman, find praise for her virtues and good qualities, and be her companion for life. Ambitious in his business, and one who finds joy in making others happy.

Modern Jack Sprats.

Jack Sprats could eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean,
And so their weekly butcher bill
Was less than yours, I ween.

HOW TO PICK YOUR 1912 CAR

Buy a well finished car with an steady reputation.

Buy a car whose adjustment is a manufacturer who has kept faith with prior customers.

Buy a car of which your friends speak well. Don't trust merely the statement of a glib salesman.

Don't buy the cheapest car. The cheapest on the market is seldom a good buy in any sort of machinery.

Buy no car because of a plausible appurtenance not yet tested for at least a year in actual service.

Age's Handicap.

A gentleman who married recently at the age of seventy-three years says old age is merely a state of mind, and intimates that one may remain young if one will refrain from having old ideas. The great trouble is that it is almost impossible for an old gentleman who insists on having young thoughts to get other people to decline to refer to him as "an old fool."

Peter H. Lightner, after a lingering and painful illness with cancer of the liver, died at his home near Maxwelton, this county about 8 a. m. last Saturday, March 16, 1912, aged about 51 years. Mr. Lightner moved to Greenbrier some years ago from Highland, county, Va. He married Miss Carrie Siple, who, with two sons—Chesley and Marvin, and one daughter, Miss Lilly—survives him. He was a nephew of A. M. McLaughlin, of the same community, and was a Deacon of the Clifton Presbyterian Church. On the 3rd of Nov. 1908, he was elected a member of the County Court of Greenbrier, and had since served in that capacity with credit to himself and satisfaction to the people. The funeral service at Clifton Church last Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. L. Lineweaver, was largely attended, after which the interment took in the cemetery there.—Greenbrier Independent.

The safe in the railway station at Durbin was blown open Tuesday night, and about $125 in money and a supposed valuable express package was taken. It was evidently the work of an expert cracker. A hole had been drilled into the knob, nitro-glycerine inserted and the door blown open. The money was all taken, other papers were not disturbed, the safe shut up and all the broken pieces and other debris carefully swept up and put out of sight under the safe, then red pepper scattered over the room. The robbery was first discovered by Senator N. C. McNeil who had come to take the early morning train and his acute senses immediately detecting the presence of the red pepper.

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee for Greenbrier county last Saturday, it was decided to hold the Greenbrier Democratic primary on Saturday, May 18th. A resolution was passed inviting the judicial committee to participate in holding the primary for the purpose of nominating the candidate for judge. It is presumed that our primary will be held on the same date. It is the first Saturday after the earliest date possible under the law to make nominations for office, May 11.

The uniform teachers' examination will be held at Cass next Thursday and Friday. At Marlinton and Academy the school houses are filled to over crowding with schools now in progress. Besides the town of Cass is conveniently located for a large number of teachers with ample hotel and boarding house accommodations.

Jason Chisman, aged about 20 years, held in jail on a lunacy charge, awaiting transportation to the Weston hospital, struck his head against the walls of the jail so hard as to break his skull, Saturday morning. Jailor McGraw and Wm. Darnell took him to Watson Monday.

By a mistake in this office an advertisement was inserted asking bids for the jail practice, when the advertisement should have been for bids for the medical practice at the county poor farm. The jail contract is let out until about August.

The Candidates

John R. Herndon, in this paper announces his candidacy for re-election to the County Court, and we believe he should be and will be retained in that most important but very trying office. He is from the largest and most important district in the county. As a member of the County Court the past year and half and as president and member of the board of education of his district for many years, Mr Hevener has enviable record a safe and sane man to be in charge of the public finances, and one to dispose to the best advantage the tax money wrung from us.

The entry of J. C. Loury in the contest for the Democratic nomination for Assessor puts three corners to that contest. He has his nerve with him to get in at this late hour, after the other aspirants Felix Waugh and J. S. McNeel and their proposed deputies, have had so long to fix their fences and allign their friends. However Mr Loury tells us he is receiving much encouragement from his many friends in both parties over the county. He has a wide acquaintanceship over the county, having been in business since early manhood, and two years ago made a house to house canvass over much of the county as a census enumerator. He is capable, careful and conscientious, and if he is nominated and elected a worthy man will have been awarded with office.

In this issue we publish the formal announcement of the Hon. John W. Arbuckle for the Democratic nomination for Judge of the 28th Circuit. He is a gentleman deeply learned in the law; for years he has been a leading attorney at the Lewisburg bar, and would be a good judge. He is a member of a fine old Greenbrier family and is widely and favorably known in this county.

Game Preserve

Business of importance brought three well known men of the State to Charleston this morning and they are quartered at the Kanawha. They are Hon. J. A. Viquesney, state game and fish warden, W. S. Baxter and H. M. Lockridge. They are all interested in the development of the recently mentioned game preserve in Pocahontas county, where it is expected that the association of which they are members will eventually have a tract of land 25,000 acres in extent fenced off for the protection of the wild game they will raise. They have already a herd of elk, and within the month of April a car load of deer will be received there from the Herman Zoological Farms, Kansas City. A telegram was received here this morning by Mr Viquesney informing him of the prepaid shipment and giving him sufficient time to make ready for the reception of the shipment. The party here today brought with them a number of pictures showing the elk received and placed in the big preserve. There is one bull and fourteen females in the herd and each one looks to be a fine specimen. It is intended to have a herd of at least 500 before the elk family is complete. A club house, a great bathing pool and other improvements on the property of the association are being erected as arranged, with promise that within a year or so the preserve will be the mecca for hundreds of sportsmen of this and other states. Every possible accomodation will be afforded there, and in the open season there will be some great times for the gunners who like to hunt big game.—Charleston Mail.

It Actually Happened.

The traditional bet of a dollar to a doughnut was recently made in a down town cafe. The man who put up the doughnut won, but when the stakes were turned over he found that the odds were got so much in his favor as he had imagined. The dollar was like the doughnut—had a hole in it.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Wanted to See Themselves.

A moving picture camera man, in an automobile, took some pictures of the crowds on the west side of Broadway between Forty-fifth and Forty-eighth streets. At least fifty persons yelled at him and asked where the pictures were to be shown. They wanted to see themselves.

We had a big flood here last week.

Several deer have been here this winter.

Elkins.—Three hundred men are thrown out of employment by fire which destroyed the plant of the Tygarts River Lumber Company at Mill Creek, on Thursday. The plant has not been idle for ten years, cutting lumber at the rate of 85,000 feet daily.

HE WAS THE PASTOR

And That Kept Him From Going the Other Way the Address.

Will Freeman of the Great Bend Tribune tells this story of a ruralite minister in western Kansas, who is also postmaster. A PLAIN STATEMENT

To the Stock Men, Wool Growers and Farmers of Pocahontas and Adjoining Counties:

WE want to state a few reasonable reasons why you should sell your wool and lambs to the Marlinton Meat Company. A statement that cannot be backed by reasons is like a ship without motive power. It will not go very far these practical days

We are here in the field and are recognized as perfectly responsible by the largest farmers, business men and financial concerns in the county. We have faithfully fulfilled every promise and obligation that we have made. We have paid in cash more money to the farmers than any other man or concern in the county or that does business in the county. We at all times pay the best prices for the products that we handle, and pay it in spot cash which gives us the reputation of being the best paymasters in the county. Our every act has been watched by keen conservative business men, and we challenge criticism notwithstanding the fact that some derogatory statements have been made by petty jealous individuals who will tell you if you don't give him the chance to skin you the other fellow will. We have no axe to grind; ours is sharp and we will hew to the line.

We say that we are in better position to handle your wool and lambs than any other parties in the county. This firm will make no deal with you that we will not fulfill to the dot. We are proud of our record and will maintain it in every respect. Talk it over with your neighbors; they will give you additional reasons why you should come in and talk it over with us.

Respectfully,

PENURIOUS POLICIES.

Commissioner Edwards of New York discussing the penurious policy of a western city, said to a reporter:

"It reminds me of Grimes. Grimes, you know, was a rich Pike county farmer. One dreadful winter day he was discovered on a lonely mountain path digging away like mad in the frozen snowdrifts. Though it was zero weather, Grimes was stripped to his undershirt, and amid the white snow clouds flying from his shovel he could be seen all red with effort and dripping with perspiration.

"What in the world is he doing?' a traveler asked, as he looked with awe at the great holes and tunnels cut by Grimes in the snow.

"'Hah,' said a bystander, 'he's lost a nickel.'"—Washington Star.

Lost Treasure.

A man who went half way around the world on a wild-goose chase for a supposed buried treasure continued from New York to Salt Lake for the pleasure of thanking the man who told him the story of a great battle which did not exist. If he will now employ somebody with an adequate head bent to take care of his own case the incident will have reached the logical conclusion.

Poverty.

Poverty is dishonorable not in itself, but when it is a proof of laziness, intemperance, luxury and carelessness; whereas in a person that is temperate, industrious, just and valiant, and who uses all his virtues for the public good, it shows a great and lofty mind. For he has no time for great matters who concerns himself with petty ones; nor can he relieve many needs of others, who himself has many needs of his own.—Plutarch.

Some People.

The trouble with some people is that they want to draw compound interest for life on the little charitable deeds they do just for the purpose of keeping the world from suspecting that they are cold-hearted and stingy.

Stringent Austrian Laws.

Americans are liable to arrest for lese majeste if they vary the position of the postage stamp on a letter.

"If you could drop in some time when you hadn't so long to stay, Mr. Pinnoles, I should be glad to see you."

"My only reason for indorsing your note, old chap, is that I haven't anything the law can touch."

"Keep on talking, Uncle Cyrus; I like to see you make your teeth move up and down."

"I used to know your old grandfather, Hewligus, and he was always poking his nose into other people's business, same as you are."

"I asked mamma if she wouldn't like to have you come and see us today, Mrs. Lupeome, and she said no."

"I've come to you, Mr. Sharpe, because I can't afford to employ a first-class lawyer."

Out-of-the-Way German Inns.

Germany probably holds the record for out-of-the-way inn names. Berlin alone can boast the "Angry Louise," the "Comfortable Lamb," the "Cold Frog," the "Dirty Parlor," the "Bloody Bones," the "Dukers' Den," the "Four-Hundred-Weight Man" and the "Musical Cats," whilst a suburban landlord, whose house stands near a cemetery and is a popular "pull up" for mourners, has dubbed it, very appropriately, the "Last Tear."

WHY HE COUNTS

Some Thing that Endures

One of the most impressive queries that can interest a person longing earnestly to know how and what to do in making the most of life. To such a person it is well that the experiences of all who have yet lived is to the effect there is nothing less worthy to be anxious about anywhere in regard to the worry and trouble of having over a pile of material for a rainy day on hand, or in other words making the chief aim of all activities to heart up wealth.

In the light of Bible truth and from what may be learned from the truth of human affairs one must feel if there be room in Heaven, it must be for those who have and live, who by early and upend much of the night with wondering how much they can secure of wealth, if by ceaseless striving that amount in putting in deposit a certain sum from week to week. For the angels can see and understand, there is not a treasure in earth of human touch, that would be worth even a farthing in the market of life, in comparison to the service of doing the best in our power for the help of our fellow being, whether friends or enemies. The rust may cover and eat those what may be accumulated, while the best that may have been given the widow, the orphan, or the oppressed, sooner or later will come back again.

"A purpose before, a motive behind,
This is the spirit of heart and of mind,
That keeps the road blooming with beauty and light
And keeps the eyes open with far seeing sight."

The Manilla Times

A highly appreciated pleasure has been recently enjoyed, for which grateful thanks are due Lieut. W. Presley Webb, now in the service of the United States in the Philippines.

The copy in hand is dated February 16, 1912, Vol. 8, No. 33, folio 48 pages. This weekly is edited with marked ability and almost makes one feel that if one wishes to hear what the truth is about pending affairs it would not be a bad idea to go from home far away at least as Manilla. For illustration let what the Manilla Times says about Mr. Shuster's withdrawal from Persia. Mr. Shuster became very prominent during his term of service in the Philippines, before his Persian appointment upon the recommendation of President Taft. In reference to severe criticism of Mr. Shuster's actions, The Weekly Times makes this remark: "There is more malice than truth in this. The history of the Persian affairs may have shown—probably did show—that Shuster was little used and less inclined to the methods of modern diplomacy, wherein speech as speech is regarded as given to man to conceal his thoughts, but nothing can take away from him (Shuster) the credit of having stood alone in a plucky attempt to help a helpless people. This credit he has been given full measure, pressed down and running over in the country of his birth, and we dare say he can stand some of the sort of thing which the Argonaut of San Francisco provides."

For reasons too numerous to specify, but all most soothingly illustrated by scenes of blood and mars, this should be remembered at the present time, by all persons of influence professions in affairs of national importance, to this effect, that no effort at conflict of partisan opinion is more liable to end in vanity and vexation of spirit, than organizing and managing systems of government out of a citizenship whose blood boughs birthright is freedom, peace and common comfort. In these spasmodic days let it not be forgotten that beneath the ocean line once more a vanished city lies and once a government known only by a sad and sorrowful history, however the persons who inspired of the birthright refused to so being so enabled of present remembrance and in the attempt to set and keep the yoke and shackle upon their brethren, all went down in self inflicted ruin. None can deeply and correctly comprehend by the lessons of human affairs, thus given expression to what he has learned:

"Ego the sampler for a while,
That men build on sin and guile
But the teeth of time and sea
Trench the old infidelity
With corroding might—they said,
In the dust at last, my friend.

"Not the town of blood, of might,
But the town of human right,
Town of cheer and sun and strength
That will shine when all at length
Sin or righteous purpose hath,
Lieth dead amid its guilt.

ACADEMY

This is the first day of April. The storms and zero weather have passed and the month of sunshine and showers has been ushered in. After emerging from a long cold winter it seems to us that there is nothing which appeals more to humanity in general than the advancing influence of spring. What happiness it gives us to think that the earth will soon be carpeted in green again and blooming flowers and singing birds will greet us once more. There is nothing more delightful, nothing more inspiring than the first halcyon days of spring. How brightly the sun shines and how comfortable it feels. We are so thankful that we are living, and so thankful to God who has condescended to remember us and bestow upon us such great blessings.

Of the fishing resorts along the Greenbrier river at this point there are none that call up sweeter memories than the "Cat Rock," "Big Bend" and "Swirl Hole." Many years ago before the railroad people devastated the timber and broke the stillness of these places and the ooze from the tanneries stained their crystal waters, they were noted for the number and beauty of the fish taken from them, and their weird and picturesque surroundings. The Cat Rocks were perhaps the most interesting. They are named Cat Rocks, because of the large cat fish which have been caught from the river which flows deep and silently at their base. The formation of these cliffs are truly wonderful. The great architect of nature has carved benches out of them which rise one above another in various shapes and beautiful symmetry. On the top most bench a gigantic pine stood whose wide spreading branches furnished a cool retreat from the hot rays of the sun, and a delightful shelter for fishermen who set hooks at night. We would like to say something about the attractions of Big Bend and Swirl Hole which are but a short distance below on the beautiful Greenbrier, but space forbids. At that time the unbroken solitude, the sporting attractions of river, hill and cliff, and the peace, contentment and happiness that rested like a genie spirit over the people will never be forgotten.

Two men from Newsberg, whose names we have not learned, were here last week trying to get our business men interested in a mark. They received some encouragement and will return again this week. It is thought that a bank will be established here at an early date.

One Bunner, from Augusta county, Va., has purchased the N. D. Simmons tract of mountain land near here, containing something over 400 acres. Price paid $3,000.00.

The school at this place has been put under rigid discipline by Prof. Chapo Wilson, owing to pernicious deportment on the part of some of the pupils.

Floyd Hinkle and family have moved to Nicholas county where they expect to make their future home.

Mrs. Agnes Clark, who has been very ill, is better, but still in a critical condition.

John A. Smith and wife, of Charlottesville, Va., were here last week attending to business and visiting relatives.

A PAPER OF MANILA

We have before us The Weekly Times, published at Manila, in the Philipine Islands. It is a paper of about the size of the Saturday Evening Post, and sells for $1.50 per annum. It claims to be the Conservative American Journal of the Orient. Price per copy 15 centavos. It is 4 years and 39 weeks old; Martin Egan, Managing Director.

One of the most important questions of the Islands is whether English is to be made the sole language of the courts. Judge Carson, a justice of the supreme court and an American, goes on record to say that to make the English language the sole language of the courts would be an act of tyranny, indefensible and irrevocable.

The paper takes issue with him. It points to the fact that eight years ago there were law schools in those islands which were teaching law in English which have wholly abandoned their English courses and replaced them with those given in Spanish. That there are judges who eight years ago were passionate students of English who today plead ignorance of the language of the people who have taken over the destinies of the islands.

The language of the people of the islands is a native dialect that must be translated into Spanish, and why not in English. Then there are the thousands of public school graduates who have taken courses in English upon the promise of the government to make English the language of the islands. The corps of translators in the employ of every court will in a measure compensate for the making of English the sole language of the courts.

Mike Beacham is about to be hung for murder. On May 11, 1908, he was a trooper of the 1st Cavalry. Enraged by the rough joking of his comrades he shot and killed Sergeant William Hoey Privates Thomas F. Woodward, George Wilson and Edward T. Clark.

He made no attempt to escape and was sentenced to imprisonment for life. He was warned that an appeal might change his sentence to that of death, but he took the appeal, and carried it through the courts to Washington to the Supreme Court. The result is that he will be hung.

At the Tin Can Camp, in Jolo, a detachment of scouts under Lieutenant W. G. Muldoon, have had a battle with the Moros, and three scouts have been wounded. Also at Tin Can Camp two native gents did run amuck and were killed by the guard.

Some high officials have started off to visit certain portions of the main island by train and automobiles. They are to hold a number of "canaos." These are meetings where the head men assemble with the people and have athletic games and barbecue cattle. Any differences existing are submitted to the council and decided.

Two cups as prizes are offered in contests among the three soccer clubs of Manilla. Soccer football is the kind we play in Pocahontas.

The market report is confined to six staples: Hemp, sugar, copra, rice, gum almacigo, and coals.

Miss Julia D. Kitts, the seven year old daughter of Lieutenant Wm P. Kitts, has travelled 46,000 miles already.

Jokes: The passenger on the P. D. Q. R. R. had a row with the conductor, and declared that hereafter the railroad would never see a cent of his money for he would stop buying tickets and pay the conductor.

Miss Mercyglo's husband was not a very bright chap. He not only did not know anything, but did not even suspect anything.

The Democrats from the various islands met February 9th to send delegates to the Baltimore Convention. They had a split. The cause of the dissatisfaction could be seen by anyone who can read between the lines whether a Mr O'Brien or a Mr Rose should be chairman of the party and the influential men in the islands.

O'Brien, the old chairman, called the convention to order and appointed J. H. Kipp, temporary chairman. A committee on credentials was chosen which was in session for several hours. The committee on credentials appointed by the temporary chairman proceeded to throw out before the Rose delegates who had come from distant islands. Malati's eight delegates were refused seats because five negroes were permitted to vote. The lone delegate from Occidental Negros was refused a seat because his credentials were incomplete. The eight delegates from Intramuros were refused seats because Judge Southworth, the empire of the committee, announced that he was acquainted with Intramuros and that he knew that there were not 137 American residents of that political division, that being the number of registered Democratic voters.

Upon the report being made, a minority report was presented by the Rose man, and this minority report was adopted by a vote of 87 to 34, and after that the O'Brien men were driven out.

O'Brien being called upon for a speech appeared to have hay on his horns and announced there would be another convention the next day.

The O'Brien delegates met the next day and held a convention and sent a contesting delegation to Baltimore.

The Philippine Islands is considered a territory, and as such has the right to delegations in national conventions.

The names of the places the delegations hail from are strange, but the story has a familiar ring to anyone who has ever attended a convention in the States.

The Baltimore Convention will thresh out the matter and probably seat both sets, let us hazard a guess.

POCAHONTAS AND ROADS

By J. M. Paris, in The West Virginia Motorist

When considering the proposed national highways the motorist closes his eyes and dreams of macadamized roads and one of them always runs by his own front yard.

This particular section of West Virginia, Pocahontas county, has awakened in a measure to the manifold blessings of good roads and will do a great deal of road work the coming year, and will make greater strides when the rural population realize that a good road is not especially built for the motor car: but that in the extra load the farmer can haul to town, the minimum wear and tear on his rolling stock, the small cost of upkeep on a poperly built road, and that the good roads movement is really a fraternal organization with but one beneficiary, THE FARMER.

The County of Pocahontas is vitally interested in the road the national government might build from the East to the West, and on account of the number of mountains to cross and the small amount this county is able to spend, it would accelerate the completion of the work in contemplation to have government or State aid. The State of Virginia has the National pike with a very excellent road from Staunton to Hot Springs and on the Jackson River Bridge. Starting from this point to Rimel, which is on the State line, is fifteen miles of average mountain road. From Rimel to Marlinton, for the most part of the thirteen miles, is fair, as considerable of this road is blue shale, the balance sand and clay. From Rimel to White Sulphur Springs, a distance of thirty-six miles, is yellow clay which is one of the best foundations for macadam work. From Marlinton to the Randolph county line one finds all kinds and conditions of roads crossing four mountains, but always on an extremely easy grade. Crossing into Randolph one follows the Tygarts Valley River to Beverly, from thence to Buckhannon, Weston and down the little Kanawha river to Parkersburg and the highway as here indicated would be the most direct route between the East and West, giving to the tourist the advantage of going via the two most popular summer resorts of the South. The trip from Hot Springs to Washington is but two hundred miles with but two mountains to cross and can be very easily made in one day. The advantage to West Virginia of such a pike cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

Sixty years ago, the late Dr. J. Newton Craig of our county and the Rev. J. C. Brown of Lewisburg, were devoted friends in their student days, at Lexington, Va., though not classmates. After Craig left college, he kept up a correspondence with his friend Brown. Thomas Plunkett, the postmaster, was a great favorite with students and cadets. One of Craig's letters was addressed

To Lexington, Va., I send this letter.
Care of Thomas Plunkets,
A wife would make him live some better,
If he only thunk it.

Now Dear Tom, if you are in town
Send this up to College,
And tell the boys it is for John Brown,
A chap that is getting knowledge.

LETTER FROM TRIPOLI

The following letter from the seat of war in Tripoli, by a general in the Turkish army, to Mr Albert Shaheen and by him translated and kindly handed to us. Their home was near Damascus. The General, Hey Anor Bayk, is a man of about forty years, a Christian, and belongs to a royal family, his grandfather being over a kingdom in northern Syria, and losing out by an invasion of the French.

Dear Friend:—I will write you today from the Alothman Troops. I came from Syria through the eastern line. I got to Tripoli December 22. The war was going on. The Alothmen with their friends the Arabs had a good stand and the advantage of the enemy. I have fought in several battles under the great leader Anwer Bayk, and we came out ahead in most of them, and now I am a leader of 7500 men, Arabs and Turks, at Darner.

One of my men found a large amount of money on an Italian who was killed in the battle of January 18. He brought the money to me, and I sent it to Amer Bayk, and he sent it to the Italian leader, General Kaneafs, asking him to send the money to the people of the dead soldier. Often our men find money and checks and even postage stamps, which they bring to us and we send it to the General Italian leader, with the man's name if possible, when and where he was killed. Would the enemy do that?

We captured one of the enemy's leaders in the big gest battle, January 25, when my men and 12,500 Italians fought all day and charged on each other and fought with their sabres and swords. We whipped the enemy badly that day. Then the next day I called for the Italian leader before me. I asked him what he thought of the battle the day before. He said it was the biggest and bloodiest battle he had ever seen.

Where were you when you were captured? He answered, the last I know I was in front and your bullets came down on us from every direction like a hard rain pouring down from above, and then I saw my men were getting scared and began to gather together until they looked like a solid mass upon the ground. And it got worse. Your men charged on mine until we could not know friend from foe. I shut my eyes and waited for death, and in that instant I heard the swords ring close to me, but the smoke was like a heavy fog and dark like night. I said to myself have we whipped the enemy or the enemy whipped us. But before I turned around I felt some one tying my hands and saying surrender at once. The man was a Turk. I thought I was a dead man sure, but the man said, cosecam, not be afraid, the Turk wont eat people. Then I looked to the left and right and saw most of my men down and the rest runing. Then your men brought me over and they treated me alright. And now they bring me before you after they took me to the picnic, which I enjoyed.

This is what the Italian said. The Arabs and Turks generally have a picnic every time they whip the enemy.

We have most everything we need and we will whip the enemy or fight as long as long as we live.

Your friend,
HER ANER BAYK.

Tripoli, January 27, 1912.

HUNTERSVILLE

Joy Poling is paying a visit to his grand parents at Belington.

Prof. Silas Walker and wife, D. L. Walker and Miss Mae Hylbert started Monday for their homes in Roane county.

The Presbyterian Sunday school wil be reorganized at this place at 10 o'clock Easter Sunday.

A. B. McComb was calling on friends on Cummings creek last Sunday.

Mrs. Price Moore, of Knapps Creek, visited Mrs. Zane Moore last week.

Miss Anna Lee Ervine went to Marlinton last week to stay a few weeks.

Miss Delphia Dearman, who taught the Sunset school, passed by here Tuesday on her way to Huntington where she will enter Marshall College.

Miss Clara Jordan, who taught the school at Sitlington, stopped here a few days last week with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Maymie Jordan.

Miss Mae Hylbert, who finished her school at Green Hill, spent last week with Mrs. Ida McComb, as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Walker.

Mrs. Joseph S. McNeel, of Academy, is visiting her father, William Curry, just above town.

Zane Moore expects to move to Minnehaha in the near future to open a hotel. We are sorry to lose him and his estimable family.

Cecil Sheets has moved his shingle mill near Ira Fitzgerald's residence where he will manufacture about fifty thousand shingles for S. L. Barlow.

Elmer Moore took his third ride on the Masonic goat here Saturday night and is now a full fledged M. M.

Robert McQuain, who is employed at Dunmore, was down to see his wife here last Saturday and Sunday.

Summers Sharp and G. R. Goodsell, of Marlinton, were here one day last week. Mr. Goodsell was talking fire insurance, but we imagine Mr. Sharp was trying to strengthen his political fence.

The music of the frogs, the lowing of the cattle, the singing of the birds, the voice of the plowmen, the shouts of the freed school children, all indicate the nearness of spring, beautiful spring.

Lovie Fray closed her school in Hill, Friday, and passed by here Saturday on her way home.

All teachers should have had their enumerations in the hands of the secretaries of the boards of education by April 1st.

The failure of the Tomlin Lumber Company has greatly effected business in our section.

Quite a number of out of town people attended the school entertainment here Friday evening.

Miss Della Wagner and her friend, Mr. Gum, of Marlinton attended the closing of our school.

The many friends of our worthy fellow townman, Mr. J. C. Loury have induced him to enter the race for assessor of this county. There is no more careful, painstaking and conscientious man in the county than Mr. Loury and should he be the nominee of the Democratic party, we know of no one who could get as much support from the Republican side as Mr. Loury would be sure to have. If a man is wanted who will stand firm as a rock for the right, nominate J. C. Loury, of Huntersville.

Last Friday witnessed the closing of a very successful term of school here, taught by Prof. Silas Walker and his brother Dwight L. both of Roane county. The afternoon was taken up by songs, recitations, and speeches by some of the patrons. In the evening was rendered a splendid program of songs, instrumental music, recitations, dialogues, comedies, farces, &c, which kept the vast audience convulsed with merriment or moved to tears, for more than two hours. Many of the features deserve special comment, and many pupils, personal commendation, but the entertainment as a whole was so good that we desist from any special comment for fear of not doing justice to all. At the close each of the teachers was presented with a handsome present by the pupils, and with many regrets that the parting time had come, the audience was dismissed. The Board of Education has asked both teachers to return next year and has received the definite promise of Prof. Walker and still hope that Mr. D. L. will see his way clear to return also, even if other schools are offering him better wages.

The bill introduced by Congressman Littlepage providing for the holding of a term of United States Court at Lewisburg has passed both houses and been approved by the President.

We are in receipt of a much appreciated letter from our friend, Will A. Young, of Davenport, Iowa, in which he says some nice things about our paper, and urges the publishing of the largest number of news letter and local communications possible as "you can hardly realize how anxiously we search for news from such sources" In closing he speaks of a typographical error we made in a recent letter from E. H. M. where we made "courtesies" read "curiosities," and says "if E. H. would attend some of our churches out in Iowa you would have no occasion to apologize for any typographical error."

WANLESS

Spring time has come with some warm days; the swelling of the buds, the green grass, the hum of the bees and the skipping lambs all revive the heart of man and we forget the snow and ice of winter.

Plowing and making sugar is the order of the day.

Feed is scarce but we feel safe now, with enough hay in this part to go through with.

Some of our teachers are preparing to test their knowledge at Case on the 3rd and 4th. We can always get the correct answer after we get home.

We read with profit a very able letter from Hon. B. B. Williams in the county papers. Mr. Williams is a progressive school superintendent, who has at heart the interest of the children and teachers.

The temperance society at Hosterman is helping out some. One got his leg broke twice at the ankle joint. It looks like the more we have about temperance the less temperate our county becomes. Some say better stop preaching long enough to live some of it would do more real good.

We are glad to see J. R. Hevener's announcement for re-election. Mr. Hevener should be elected again as he has just learned the county's needs, and general situation of roads, county funds, &c. The county funds are safe and well protected as well as not extravagantly spent, and so far he has no pets.

Forrest Warwick was in this part recently looking after friends and the three lines.

The new road near Wanless is nearing completion—the only road this side has. Some good work was done on the Cass road—work that will not be lost by the first rain. If more work was done like this the road problem would be solved. A few more changes will set our roads going.

C. C. Warden, Allen Galford, and Charlie Hoover attended the Arbogast sale.

T. R. Beverage is attending circuit court as a juror.

H. L. Kesler attended county court, Wednesday the 3rd.

ONOTO

One of the store clerks has asked for a Bill of Beanwood to put up a new telephone linesman, as the present one seems to be artificial.

Miss Mae Hannah, of Clover Lick, is visiting in this part.

Spring has come at last; the frogs sing early and late. Also, the parrot continues to squawk in the News from Onoto about the Democrats and roads. But we consider the source and think he like the wood chuck, will soon peck himself to sleep.

A. S. Barlow and George Wheeler, of Warwick, were business visitors here a few days ago.

Walker Irvine was here buying fur, recently.

Lanty Hogsett was in this part recently, on business for Joe Hannah.

Some people are growing.

Wheat is looking well.

Some people are howling about mud and bad roads, when they just pay tax on anything but a little black dog and some old bone.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt spoke from the rear of the C. & O. train at Roosevelte yesterday morning.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DELEGATES.

The State Sunday School Association will be held at Wheeling, W. Va., April 30 and May 1st and 2nd. Pocahontas county is entitled to send as delegates all pastors and denominational missionaries, all county officers, one delegate from each district and five at large. All persons that can go as delegates will please notify L. J. Moore, County Secretary, Marlinton, W. Va., who will furnish the proper credentials. Rev. C. A. Buchanon has been selected to represent Edray district, and goes as a special representative of the Campbelltown school. Other schools follow the lead of this wide awake school and send a delegate. J. N. White will to go as a delegate at large, and Rev. D. S. Boggs has agreed to go as a pastoral delegate.

This still leaves many vacancies which we hope to have filled before the convention date because it is hoped that Pocahontas county will be ably represented in what promises to be the greatest event in the Sunday School history of this State.

The Sunday schools of the country are character builders and are entitled to the time and labor of every christian and every business man. It means a little sacrifice to attend this convention but the splendid program and association with trained workers and those interested in the work from all parts of the state will more than repay.

L. J. MOORE, Secretary.

GINSENG

Outside in the Gazetteer Valley we see from the hills window at Mont Benton a garden not only enclosed with a strong structure but covered over the top. They desire to be the object of the burglar proof garden and we are told that it is a growing fact. At different places in the county men are engaged in the raising of this plant of high market value and they have met with more or less success in its cultivation.

We would like to have these growers report their experience and their observations as to this mysterious plant. There is a wide feeling in the north of this county as this is brought to mention one thousand dollars damages for the destruction of a growing lot.

The sass is still to be found growing wild here but has become very scarce compared to the condition a generation ago. The American ginseng is not the true ginseng. The demand for the root is in China and there the Chinese ginseng is sold usually for its weight in gold, though certain rare shapes may bring as much as $400 an ounce. The value is fixed by the shape of the roots. Those which most nearly resemble the human form are the most valuable.

The name ginseng is Chinese and means thigh-shaped, or that which most nearly resembles a man's thigh. It is also been given the name of "the first of the plants." Ancient superstitions of the western people attributed all sorts of magical powers to the mandrake for the same reason. This plant grows in Spain and in many other countries and belongs to the potato family. All sorts of powers were believed to be possessed by it from fruitfulness in women to financial prosperity.

Read Genesis 30th chapter and 14th verse where the same properties are ascribed to it. And Reuben went in the days of wheat harvest, and found mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said unto Leah, Give me I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes. And she said unto her, Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldst thou take away my son's mandrakes also?

Rachel had been barren and desirously desired a son and it was for this reason that she wanted the mandrakes. At one time the mandrake was used as a narcotic in surgical operations. In Macbeth, Banquo refers to the plant: Or have we eaten of the insane root that takes the reason prisoner?

It grows at times in the shape of the human form and in ancient times those who gathered it would not uproot it until they had stopped their ears so that they could not hear the shriek that the plant emmitted as it was torn from the soil. As no one would dare venture to tear it up without the ears being closed, for ages it was believed to utter a sound. The truth of this belief could not be tested on account of the terrible consequences. In Romeo and Juliet is the following passage: And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of the earth, that living mortals, hearing them, run mad.

We have alluded to the mandrake at this great length because it seems to have been endowed with the same properties by an enlightened people which the Chinese at the present time give to ginseng.

The American ginseng is the Panax Quinquefolium, which means the five-leaded plant. It is found in rich and well shaded soil. It is a perennial, that is, it lives from year to year, as opposed to the annual, which is a plant which lives only for one year. The cultivated ginseng in Japan runs to seed in one year and has to be sown as annual. It looks like this might be a very important thing to consider in the cultivation of ginseng. We all have very well that we have to dig our potatoes the same year in which they are planted for if left in the ground to continue to grow and get larger the succeeding season, we would fail to preserve left.

There is little doubt that the wild ginseng of Pocahontas county is a perennial. Our old sangers when they found a place where the plant existed and saw several specimens growing, would not take only what they saw but would ignore the earth for roots around and often find the largest and most perfect roots hidden in the ground. The profession of the sang digger is very similar to the gold placer miner, who looks for free gold hidden in the ground. All sang diggers carry a hoe to explore the earth where there are signs of sang. Last year some one went into the fastnesses of Cheat Mountain and explored for sang and came out with three two bushel bags full of sang roots.

The plant is hard to hoe. You will find many men of age here who cannot discover it and who have never seen it growing. It is like finding four leaf clover or Indian arrow heads. The eye is to be trained and educated to take in the particular plant in the rich places where other green plants are growing.

The merchants here must be on the lookout to early learn to know this valuable root by sight. If they are not judges of the product they are apt to find a certain part of the purchase declared to be poke root or some other worthless kind. It also helps the weight of sang to inlaid shot or like heavy substances in the heart of the roots. Horse raddish roots are pretty fair imitations of the real thing.

The Chinese believe that the root has the power of prolonging life and that it will restore virile powers of the aged and impotent. It is the great youth restorer of the Chinese empire, and there is no way to account for the belief unless it is that the patient having great faith in the remedy is cured through his mind.

We can very well see how an aged Chinese gentleman of wealth if he really believed that was a certain remedy by which he could be restored to health and youth, would not begrudge a large portion of his fortune. He is required to take regular course of from three to eight days and is required to abstain from the use of tea and to be careful of his diet. He takes a dose just before retiring and one on arising in the morning. At the end of his course of abstinence and rest he feels much better. He does not give the credit to the simple remedies of rest, plain food, sleep, and the general improvement of his habits, but to the ginseng which is a mild and harmless herb of slightly medicinal properties.

Doctors are said to give a certain class of patients bread pills and the patients improve rapidly under the treatment and are helped by the faith cure. The ginseng doctor selling his wares at $400 the ounce and making old men young is nothing but the epotheosis of the herb doctor.

If DeSoto could have found his fountain of youth he would no doubt still be selling bottle water for something like a hundred dollars a split and finding many takers. Weak withering age with its heritage of despair.

"Years steal
Fire from the mind, as vigor from the limb;
And life's enchanted cup but sparkles near the brim."

The way in which the medicine is prepared is to take the ginseng and soak and macerate it in water in which rice has been boiled twice for a period of three days. It is then suspended over the fire and afterwards dried and the result is something that is like resin. The dose is from 60 to 90 grains.

It is considered a valuable and acceptable present for a friend. The American might send a box of cigars, but the Chinese gentleman will send a package of ginseng medicine and a little double kettle, beautifully finished. There is space between the outside or jacket and the inner kettle for water. In the inner kettle there is placed rice and water and the medicine and the whole placed on the fire. The patient does not drink tea for a month after using ginseng and he feels considerably better and younger. "What we ardently wish, we soon believe."

Ginseng in China has been imperial property and the government has disposed of it to those privileged to deal in it for its weight in gold. Then those dealers make their profit from the credulity of the old men who would be young again.

The children climb the hill-side,
To gather flowers of spring.
For April showls and sun-shine
Those silent wind beauties bring.

JUDGE BRANNON ON THE RECALL

Editor of the Mail:

Having declared that I will not be a candidate for another term as judge of the Supreme Court, I feel that I can, without impropriety, give my views upon certain important questions now before the people. Having had an experience of thirty-two years as a judge of a circuit court and the State Supreme Court, I feel that such service enables me to form an opinion upon those matters, as they involve questions of constitutional law of vast import in the very structure of the government; and I feel further that having no reputation for office, that opinion is fair and impartial, clouded by no bias between the two great parties. The questions to which I refer relate to the new proposition, recall of officers and judicial decisions. I shall write no long tedious article upon the many details entering into these questions. In a few words, my opinion is that the adoption of the propositions would cause a mighty change in the very fabric of the government, fraught with danger to its safety, the security of life, liberty and property and the rights of the minority. When the Revolution closed our patriot fathers had before them the problem: What plan of government shall we adopt? Now the burning question was debated in the great convention which adopted the National Constitution. On the one hand, monarchal power. Its horrors, so dark in history, could not be entertained for a moment. Our fathers had just fought a war of eight years to free themselves of it. On the other hand was absolute Democracy. That would not do. How could the people of a great nation, or even one state assemble en masse to make laws or make decisions upon those laws, affecting the whole people, or as between individuals? It was considered impossible. The people would have to assemble in mass in almost perpetual session. How could they get together? How remain in session long enough for calm deliberation? There could be no thoughtful action in such assemblage. And where could the minority find safety in times of excitement? This plan was deemed impracticable.

Our fathers chose the mean between extreme, that form of government under which we have lived and prospered for 125 years. Under it we have lived, married and inter married, and our children have been born, so long our internal peace unbroken save that one sad event, the Civil War, which did not come from defect in our form of government. Since that event the government has remained the same. The able men who framed the Confederate Constitution did not adopt Recall, but adhered to the system of the fathers. This system stands approved by 125 years of test, consecrated as the work of fathers now asleep, whom we have always regarded as the wisest, purest and best of God's human kind. We cannot do better than they did. That system rests on written constitution as the highest law limiting and regulating governmental powers. It is a free government by the people for the people through the people, as Mr. Lincoln assered. Man cannot frame a better one. It is a free representative government, because its powers are exercised by agents chosen by the people at frequent intervals at open polls. It is the essence of free government. To prevent any power or officer from exercising functions too great, it is divided into three main departments. This feature of our constitution is the very citidel of liberty. It is now proposed to turn over these powers into the hands of a majority of the people at elections in times of heated excitement when real reflection and examination will not rule.

As to the recall of officers. If a governor or judge do an act not satisfactory to a given portion of people, an election is called and he is turned out. How can there be freedom of action under this plan. The governor or judge is never there acting, not according to honest judgment, but to meet popular favor. How many elections? As many as will meet demands of a certain section of the people. There is an end of this recall officers. The people have now a reasonable power of recall. We recall our highest officers, president and governor, every four years, United States Senators every six years, members of the House of Representatives and House of Delegates and half of the state senators every two years. These are the great law making powers.

The state judges are elected by the people for short terms, and and may be removed for misconduct at any time. The new proposition is to remove them for honest error of judgment.

Recall of Judicial Decisions.

It is even proposed to submit decisions of the Supreme courts to vote. A decision is made as to the validity of a statute, and a fraction of the people disapprove it. They call an election. Away goes the decision, and another is made in haste amid popular clamor. How can a court act freely under such circumstances? When is there any settled law? Whenever a decision is made, and a vote called upon it, the people of the whole state, without due deliberation, without law learning, or experience in controversy and haste, sit as a supreme court to reverse the Supreme Court. One vote lays down the law thus, in the next another way. There is no law upon which men may rely. Precedent goes to the wind; indeed there can be no precedent. Under the Recall, if a statute takes away your life or liberty, your jury trial, your religious freedom, or the free exercise by one denomination of its creed, these or any other great right go, because when a vote is taken approving the act after the court has declared it invalid, no power can give these rights back. Do not say that these are unsupposable cases. Such cases have occurred and may occur again. And I ask how can the people at the polls act on court decisions without the record before them? Will you print the record of the cases thousands in number and distribute them to every voter, or even at the voting precincts? A court or jury must have evidence before decision can be made. This proposition of recall of decisions is preposterous. Where the limit or end? It may be the loss of liberty, or revolution and destruction of the government.

"Rather bear those ills we have than fly to others that we know not of."—Judge Henry Brannon in Charleston Mail.

SEREPTA'S WIDOW

I Kings 17: 8-17.

A woman of Sarepta, a widowed woman she,
Was gathering, to kindle fire, some fagots two or three.

This woman of Sarepta, O she was very poor,
A little meal, a cruse of oil, behold her meager store.

And yet, she fed a Prophet, she loaned unto the Lord,
And He returned with interest according to His word.

The widow of Sarepta gave of her care and toil,
And lo, the meal increased each day, and so the cruse of oil

If we remember Zion, God will fulfil His word,
And there is ever payment in lending to the Lord.

The woman of Sarepta, a widowed woman she,
Had learned to trust Lord Jesus, and trust implicitly.

And O, how often since that time, the church of God hath sung,
Sarepta's widow and her faith, in every land and tongue.

The moonshine people still teach their boys to shoot, a gun, to ride a horse and to tell the truth.

There is some question as to which Colonel Roosevelt most needs, a political manager or a guardian.

Governor Wilson would to get off the Populist ticket in Nebraska but he waited too long and his name will appear on the ticket.

The Colonel says the New York primaries are a farce and a fraud. We wonder what kind of primaries southern communities will hold.

The Detroit Free Press in commenting on the fact that an Arkansas mob lynched the wrong negro, says that it is evident that there are times that the people cannot be trusted.

The Colonel dissecting his former friend, President Taft, pronounces him a good man of a slightly frontlined type. He says that nobody loves the knave as much as the honest fool.

The railroad schools have been sliding this past month of March. One train crew chalked up 46 hours extra time during the month and section men shoveled hard to let the mail trains get by.

The Colonel says vile things about the President, and there are many hard things said about The Colonel. There can be but one end to this kind of campaigning, and that is to raise a universal cry "Turn the rascals out!"

A lady in Georgia is writting letters in behalf of Woodrow Wilson and says that he was her first sweetheart. This lady seems to be happily married to a distinguished Georgia citizen, and so we have a inkling of a woman that may be misunderstood.

The same week the Allens shot up the court in Carroll county, someone sent a bomb to a trial judge in New York City. The bullet or the bomb? You judges can pay your penny and take your choice. Missionaries are needed to send to New York City and to Carroll County, and teach the people not to shoot or send bombs.

Champ Clark's boom is steadily growing and many believe that he will be nominated at Baltimore on the first ballot. He is reaping the reward of keeping his mouth shut. He has had considerable success in keeping away from dynamic subjects which are apt to explode and do an injury. If asked whether he was for the initiative, referendum or recall, or whether he was against them, he would probably remark that it was a pleasant day.

We would caution our Democratic friends not to get too much worked up over the county primary for it does not pay to get too red headed about any particular man in a primary when the county is as close as this one is. We advise just a moderate enthusiasm until after the primary, and let the big fight come on this fall. There is going to be enough election on the 5th day of November.

A lawyer in Randolph county relates that he once brought a suit for the killing of a hound dog in the court of a justice of the peace and the case was one of considerable interest. Word was passed around to all who were fond of hounds that if they would attend the trial they would hear all about the hound dog law and how and all the hound dog people turned out. There a jury was empaneled for and an array was summoned from the bystanders who heard a verdict for the plaintiff.

In New York City the other day a Socialist was tried by the Magistrate upon a charge of spitting upon the United States flag. The court sentenced him to thirty days in jail. The flag which was presently destroyed was in court as evidence and the lawyer for the prisoner called it a rag. When requested to apologize to the court, the lawyer said that he would rather not. We applaud the stand taken by the court. When any law abiding and unoffending man would see there the flag should hide on the spot. If he wants to have an case of this kind, give him enough of it.

Probably no State in the Union has been so disgraced and misrepresented outside of its borders as our very well beloved West Virginia. The pictures in sheets and periodicals of both sides alike, the way we vote. What we need are missionaries to ding her fame, and one of who will make it their first business to mention her good name on every possible occasion. In New York City the other day a business man said: Why one of the Barkdulls is running for governor of your State? The distinguished Dr. Barkdull would not appreciate the use of his name and might possibly knock him down.

The Colonel passes through the State of West Virginia last week and duly admonished us. At Somerville he gave a glowing account and among the numerous railroad tracks and the general appearance of this railroad town, talked for about four minutes on the subject of the rights of train men to be paid for their injuries. A large crowd had gathered to hear him but when Barker rendered the ball navel and the audience heard the other kind of tone an sigh and on to the next place which was Huron where the people crowded the tracks so that the train had to stop before getting to the depot and lost six valuable minutes.

We are to have a primary election this year. We had been duly admonished by the Republican party that this was our bounden duty and it looks like the Democratic Committee had done this upon the suggestion of the Republican friends. As a matter of fact it has been the custom of the Democratic party in this county to hold primaries whereas our Republican friends are such recent converts to the system that they do not know how to electioneer for a primary. The first primary held by them was in 1910, while we have been holding them so many years that memory runneth not to the contrary. We do not know how it got into their heads that the committee might not do its duty by the people this year and call a primary. Our adversaries are recent converts to the plan and as usual in such cases are showing an inclination to dogmatize such as often accompanies apostacy.

If you have a friend who is running for office he should have your pity rather than your blame. Bear with him for a few short months and you will find him restored to you clothed in his right mind and over his midsummer madness. It is a disease that may attack any one. Many expose themselves to the contagion. But whether they do or not, it comes to almost every man, the gnawing to run for office, and whether he is beaten or elected, he is cured at least for the time being. Some men are immune after one attack of the dread disease and others have recurrent cases. The attacks become more severe and annoying, and in some cases are chronic. There is no hope for the chronic case. Even if given the best sort of office for life, when the attack comes on, the patient will resign to run for some office or other. Such persons should be treated gently and allowed to run for the result of the election will give them temporary relief and tide them over to the next sickly season.

Three Republican candidates for governor addressed the voters of Pocahontas county on the first day of court. Dillon, Hatfield and Swisher are all big husky broad shouldered mountaineers. Each one is six feet or more and for physical ability, not to say beauty, each might pose for a picture of the whiteman's hope. It seemed to be an awkward business for them. What they do not know about conventions would not amount to much, but this thing of a primary in fifty-five counties on the same day is a departure from the school of politics in which they have been educated. A large audience of representative citizens listened patiently and respectfully and no demonstration was given to any of the candidates. It is not our idea of politeness to go wild over any candidate with two rivals looking on. We do not know for sure but it seemed to us that Swisher had the ear of the old war horses of Republicanism in this county, though Dillon has many friends here. Hatfield is a stranger but he made many friends during his visit here.

The pastil young man from the New York Daily Rumor was caught by nightfall in the dark recess of the mountains of the Blue Ridge. He had heard many tales of the lawlessness of the southern mountaineers and had written five lines himself about the ferocious and barbarous class of people. Taking his courage in his hand he approached the dwelling of a mountaineer under the assurance by a kind spring a shepherd dog lacked butterfly, but suggested he tell in about that there was no harm intended. The boarded mountaineer bade him welcome but the city man waited to find about his mother that trust him, and in the latter exercise of this

W. S. Edwards, of Charleston, has become the owner by purchase of the hunting rights of the Cheat Mountain Sportsman Association on Cheat River. Calvin and Cameron Meeks, the twelve year old sons of Jim Meeks, are the champion ground hog killers of Elk Lick Run, which community produces more ground hogs to the square than any in the state. During the season of 1911 these boys took one hundred and eighty-seven ground hog scalps. Most of them were killed with a twenty-two rifle, and anybody who knows about hunting ground hogs knows that it requires a brain shot from such a small gun to stop and save a ground hog, for if he makes his hole he is gone, no matter how desperately shot.

Council was in session Monday night, and passed an ordinance requiring the garbage of the town to be deposited and burned at one convenient place to be designated by the sergeant instead of being scattered promiscuously over the landscape as is now the practice. A meeting of council is called for tonight to consider the road bond question.

The Twenty-second Annual Reunion of the United Confederate Veterans will be held in the city of Macon on the 7, 8 and 9 of May, 1912.

Marlinton - - West Virginia

The three young sons of John H. Doyle, of Clover Creek, recently had a rather exciting experience with a wild cat. Their father had been trapping for cat, and the boys would look the trap. One morning they found an immense wild cat caught by one leg. Instead of sending for help they called for the old family shepherd dog and set about to kill the cat themselves. The old dog went valliantly in, but was just about eaten up before he could get away, and the boys' sticks and stones made little impression on the wild cat other than to make him renew his efforts to escape sufficiently strong to pull his leg out of the trap. Had the boys gotten within reaching distance of the wildcat the results might have been serious.

The Allegheny Sportmen's Association has secured from Col. R. S. Turk a lease of the hunting and fishing rights on a tract of 13,000 acres of forest land on the on the Alleghanies in Pocahontas and Bath counties. Other leases for timbered tracts are pending and will probably be closed this week. The Association is experiencing little or no trouble in securing the hunting and fishing rights on these lands as it is the intention of the association to stock their preserves with game of all kinds and guard the forests and their game against fire and other depredations.

WEST VIRGINIA VS. U. S.

Senators Clarke and Watson, with Senator Martin, of Virginia, have discovered a tributary overlooked even in the sovereign wealth of the State. It appears by careful reading of the grant by which Virginia disposed of the great North-west territory now composing Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and a part of Minnesota that she reserved to herself all the riches of the then original states, as states, the benefit of any to may realized from the sales of the vast territory. Whatever this claim has been treated as though the income from these lands were to augment the treasury of the Federal Government. A reading of the grant makes it plain that Virginia reserved that any money realized from these lands was to accrue to the benefit of the States in the original confederation.

At this time Virginia is burdened with a great debt imposed by the necessities of company promotion which prevailed prior to the Civil War, and a finding of the Supreme Court of United States puts a large part of the debt upon West Virginia, though the people of the Western waters were not to blame for the high finance operations in Richmond, and received but little in the way of improvements.

We did not take the soft motion put by Virginia very seriously. We had by a curious course of self assertion lulled ourselves into a complete sense of security. Only the older men remembered that there was an unsettled account between the two States. It looked like Virginia lawyers were wasting their time in explaining to the Supreme Court that ten to six is always fair, but the Supreme court took the view that this debt must be settled according to the holdings of the old masters based on area and population, and we found ourselves one morning saddled with an enormous debt which we had solemnly declared in legislature assembled that we did not owe.

It was a great shock and a great surprise to us. We West Virginia people pride ourselves upon our financial honor. We pay on the dot and we have no patience with the man who lives in luxury and does not pay his debts. This finding of the court put us in a dreadful position. On the face of the decision we not only had to pay but we had tried to repudiate a debt. We were like the man who serves himself to pound the contents of inclination and has the pleasure, and suffers both in his health and in his pocket.

If ever there was a time when it behooved us to take stock of our resources it is now.

We have in the Senate of the United States one of our best lawyers and one of our best business men, and a former governor who will tell us that this makes the best financial team for a state.

It is due to the researches of these gentlemen that we have a chance to collect from the general government a sum sufficient to free our State from debt. At least there is still hope that we may prove to be a debt collecting State.

It has always seemed curiously wrong that Virginia should have given up the richest part of the United States and not be overwhelmed by a great debt. So one of us has been inspired to sail down the Ohio River and observe the prosperous towns and rich country on the former back with not a dark regret that Virginia had not made the bad bargain some of the river instead of upon the western brink of the river.

Virginia after the Revolutionary War had more territory than all of the other states combined. The other states were afraid to have a union in which one state would have a majority of the territory. Statesmen accepted a subtlety proposition to the effect of cutting up the Virginia territory. Without that the complexity of the case has not appeared.

To the best Virginia constitutional and enveloped law, and she refused to become a party to the proposition to form a more perfect union. The same Jew-hunch to a private trade must have been necessary to each of the original states though it does not seem to have effected them to the extent that Maryland was.

Virginia to secure the union possible gave up the immense territory with the provision that the moneys arising from the lands be put into a common holding for the benefit of the states then contracting and Maryland should also come in. The constitution afterwards adopted provided that any rights that the state had should be preserved.

March, 1781, the states adopted a constitution called "Article of Confederation and Perpetual Union between the States."

This amounted to no more than a treaty between the many states. It had a single house of Congress made up of delegates elected by the legislatures of the several states. There was no common or supreme court, and congress had no practical power. At best it was but an advising body.

It is to be distinctly remembered that the "Article of Confederation," was between the States only. The constitution afterwards adopted was by the People. What this word meant was afterwards settled by the greatest war the world ever saw.

The deed that was made by Virginia for the Northwest territory was executed in 1784 and during the time when the thirteen states were as separate and independent as are France and Germany today. The Congress of the United States had no governing power. As long as Virginia held the greater part of the territory, a closer and more perfect union was impossible. When she agreed that this territory was to be common property held in trust for these separate counties, it made it possible to form such a nation as the United States.

It must be remembered that the first government fully organized was not until George Washington was inaugurated president under the constitution on April 30, 1782. The new constitution went into operation March 4th, 1789, but the inauguration was delayed for nearly two months.

The North-west territory was ceded for the express purpose of making the union possible and to twelve of the original states and to Maryland should she go into the contract. To the students of history the condition of the country under the "Article of Confederation" was entirely different to that under the Constitution.

There was no harmony or union. The states had no president or head. Any law passed could not be enforced. It might beg for money but it could not compel the people to furnish it. It could not draft soldiers. There was no common currency. The people of one state could not trade in any other state.

At this time in eighties of the eighteenth century the states had become jealous and hostile. They had only one mutual interest and that was the North-west territory ceded by Virginia and for which New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts made what might be termed quit claim deeds. The only power which the congress under the Confederation ever exercised with any degree of success was a code of laws passed for the Northwest territory in the year 1787.

Congress under the constitution continued to hold the Northwest Territory, under the following section:

"The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State."

And this clause of Article VI: "All engagements entered into before the adoption of this constitution shall be valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation."

Under the deed from Virginia the United States has received roughly speaking one hundred million dollars. Not one cent has the nation contributed to the original landowner, the State of Virginia, in return for the lands.

So far as known no representative of Virginia, Kentucky, or West Virginia ever interested himself in the question of the trust fund which was created from the sale of those lands until our present representative raised the point. There has been not a going a movement of supreme importance to West Virginia. A successful termination of the issue will forever redound to the honor and glory of the statesmen who have it in charge.

It seems plain when once pointed out but the fact remains that all of our statesmen have been blind to the fact that a settlement could have been demanded at any time. The Virginia purchase has never been paid for.

It will be of the greatest interest to every West Virginian to read carefully and painstakingly the history of the country from 1781 to 1789 and the more he reads the more firmly he will be convinced that Senator Chilton's bill has real merit, the only wonder being that the matter has been overlooked so long.

He will be impressed with the fact that Virginia ceding control of this territory provided that she should receive compensation and that the constitution preserved all rights she had under the deed of conveyance.

The procedure will be to obtain leave to prosecute a suit before the court of claims, from which it may go to the Supreme Court of the United States, and if the findings in the courts is favorable, Congress will appropriate a sum sufficient to pay any amount so found.

The Northwest Territory was eventually divided into five states as follows: Ohio admitted in 1803; Indiana, 1816, Illinois, 1818; Michigan, 1837; Wisconsin, 1848; and all of Minnesota lying east of the Mississippi river admitted in 1858.

As we see it Congress had no right to mingle the funds received for lands in the Northwest Territory with the other revenues of the Federal Government, but must account for the same as a trust fund to the original beneficiaries.

Washington, April 10.—The saving that would be affected by the adoption of an amendment recently proposed by Senator C. W. Watson of West Virginia to one of the pending tariff bills which provides for the suspension of the collection of the duty of 25 cents a bushel on potatoes until September 1st, is shown by the fact that it has been estimated that on a recent single importation of potatoes from England the government received $50,000 in duties at the rate of 25 cents a bushel. Commenting on this the New York World says, "The estimated duty of $50,000 which the Government will collect from a single importation of potatoes from England will add that amount to the national revenues. But who will pay for it? If the $50,000 were paid by the British potato growers or shippers for the privilege of selling their product in American markets it would constitute a real gain to the national income. Unfortunately for that theory, it will be included in the price charged for the potatoes and will be paid for in the end by the American consumer. It will represent merely the transfer of the amount from individual pockets to the national pocket, so to speak, and will not add a penny to the productive revenue of the country. The tariff process of robbing Peter to pay Paul is beautifully illustrated in this incident of the addition of $50,000 to the country's collective wealth by abstracting it from the individual consumer through a higher cost of living." Should Congress adopt Senator Watson's amendment it would effect a saving of $500,000 to $1,000,000 a month to the people of the country in the purchase of one of the necessities of life.

A ROAD LETTER

A great deal has been said about roads in the past, and the question is still, how will we or can we have a good road on Back Mountain? When we go back five years ago and find that 32 miles of this road has had about $97.00 per mile or $3,000.00 for this part of the district and when we look at the improvements made who will say that but little improvement has been made, excepting near the Woodlea community. The whole matter is plain and clear without any system whatever, or one hope of ever making a good road while while the road is being handled on the plans of recent years.

Unexperienced men whose honesty is not questioned expend the public money, work where they please when they want much or little it matters less. On grade from 7 to 15 degrees it matters not just so we work is what fills the average road man's mind. The next great mistake is that too many simply dig or scrap off of the tops of the banks a little surface in the road, and the first rain it all goes out the water break, and the tired man's hard days' work is all lost to the road. Yet he feels that he got his money honest which no doubt he has.

The next question arises in the road contractor's mind: there is not enough money allowed to do anything with and I will simply hasten along and strike here and there till my time is up for my money. We do not say that these men do not work. They have done a lot of work doubtless for all the pay they receive; but the question is yet to be answered: Will this ever give us a road? We all answer from experience, No, not until work is begun in this way. Put what we get on a right grade. Commence the road with side ditches, throw up in the center, drain the road well with culverts, (The court agrees to pay for the lumber,) take out the Big stones, a little dynamite is death on said rocks. It is true it looks small to start on with but $18 to $20 per mile, but if that much work is done right it will stay for years while we pass on and in five or six years we will be surprised to see what improvement have been made. Let us not work on the grade where it is not lawful and when the court sees our grade is too heavy they will help us by making a re-location. And shall I not go deeper in this great subject. Too many of our people have not the good road movement at heart. This surely accounts for a great deal of our bad roads. The time is here while we are in the country's greatest prosperity and while our natural resources are being manufactured by capitalists, thus paying the greater part of our road funds, that we should all get busy.

H. L. Kaslee,
Road Superintendent.

Editor Times:

In looking over your valuable paper, I see the announcement of H. E. White for the office of sheriff of Pocahontas county. While I am not a resident of the county now and have no voice in the election, it gratifies me to see good, clean men like H. E. White and J. W. Goodsell taking an interest in public affairs. You often hear the remark made that "politics has become so rotten that good men rarely offer for office." I don't know how true this statement may be, but hope there is no foundation for it, whatever, for if this be true, the foundation of our entire government must be "shaky."

Reverting to my "text" I feel it my duty to say a word in praise of Mr. White as an official—as he is not generally known over the county and deserves the hearty support of every loyal citizen in the county, regardless of party. To him more than to any one individual, is due the credit of breaking up the illicit sale of intoxicants in Pocahontas county. While police at Durbin, it was my happy (or unhappy) lot to be affiliated with in the duties of "cleaning up the place" and thereby set an example for the whole county.

In all his public duties he was always at his post, and while at times he emerged with bullet holes through his hat, he never for an instant shrank from duty, and when his term of office expired, it was the comment of the traveling public that "Dunbar is the cleanest little town in the state."

This article is not written from any personal motive and is unsolicited. The voting public have begun to think for themselves, and the time is here when the people are demanding clean public officials. No more suitable man could be selected for the office of sheriff than H. E. White, a man strictly honest, upright, and white by nature as well as by name.

THOUGHTS ON MUSIC

For ten or twelve years it was the writers privilege to attend sessions of the Pocahontas Musical Association. The conductors of the Associations were so pressing in their wishes for lectures on music, that to meet their requests special preparation was made. It is now your correspondent's purpose to give an outline of what was said in these lectures, as a contribution to the history of music in our county during the period referred to.

Looking over the notes used in the delivery of the lectures I find these words of Job so much in evidence that I will repeat them so as to give the readers of The Times an idea what the lectures were intended to bring to the attention of the many persons young and old, members or visitors of the association. "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? Who laid the corner stone thereof when the morning stars sang and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" Job 38, 4-7.

So far as explorers have made search, no people are found, knowing nothing of the Musical Idea, so co-extensive is this idea with the Religious Idea. In point of fact the Musical Idea was the ideal language of the emotions and was in existence and use before the syllables of articulated speech were known. Birds sang in the leafy bowers of Eden before they were ever called birds or named by Adam. A singing bird was the first professor of music and interpreter of the Musical Idea. The summer breezes breathing through the water reeds, sighing through the forests, hissing through the tall and waving grasses, the rythmic beating of the waves along the seashore, the monotomous bass of the water falls, made harmony and melody long before Pithagoras had ever dreamed of the music of the spheres.

Plutarch receives the credit of saying these wonderful words. The first and noblest use of music was said of old to be the praise to the immortals, and the next noblest use was for the purifying, regulating and harmonizing the souls of the mortals. Plutarch may never have written anything more worthy of his reputation, yet in the Book of Job there is an utterance far surpassing anything ever attributed to Plutarch, The morning stars sang together and all the sons of God chanted aloud for joy.

In this quotation from the Bible we learn not only the natural and pleasing but also the divinely ordered union of music and worship. Attending the creation of what now appears to us a dim, disordered world, music sounded from the stars, and the accompanying voices are those of the sons of God.

This doctrine of the intimate relation of music and worship in the on-going of the universe is apparently much older than the most ancient literature now accessible to us. Chaldeans, Babylonians and Egyptians whose systems of music, worship and astronomy were the result of tradition and of long contemplation re-affirm the ancient idea that the motives of all celestial bodies are regulated by musical intervals and that thus they make everlasting harmony. Hence the music of the "ever during" spheres is no new poetic figment.

This conception of music, originally Asiatic, passed later with many principles of knowledge and civilization by way of Phoenicia and Egypt into Greece, and thus became incorporated in the ancient thought and worship of the Europeans. Europe being our Fatherland, it is readily perceived how it comes that music and worship are so closely associated in virtually all of our religious observance. In listening to prayer and praise at one of the most remote of our mountain christian homes, how thrilling the thought, that had it not been for the morning stars singing together and the sons of God chanting for joy, there would have been no prayer and praise here, nor associations for the learning and practice of sacred music.

The sixth and last month of the Clover Lick school closed March 30, 1912, with an enrollment of 11 boys and 8 girls, total 19. Those neither absent nor tardy during the month were Mabel Lang, Otis Lang, Thelma Young, Frank Gum, Edward Sharp and Randolph Gilbert. We think that the children have done splendidly and have profited by their school work the past term. I heartily thank the good people of Clover Lick for their hospitality shown me during the past winter. They are also to be complimented on their interest in the school and their children. I am sorry to say that only one pupil of the school, Mabel Lang, will have her name on the State Honor Roll for good attendance.

The secretary of our board of education having had a little controversy with some teachers who in making up their permanent registers, count the holidays as days taught, thereby making 120 days as a total for days present, absent and non-member instead of 120 days less the holidays, and for the benefit of teachers, secretaries and school statisticians in general we submit a letter from our state superintendent on this point which makes it clear and fully sustains the opinion of our secretary. "Dear Sir:—With regard to the making up of the permanent report, I suggest that the total number of days should not include the holidays. For instance in a six months' term where there are three holidays, the permanent register should show 117 days taught and three holidays.

Very truly yours,
M. P. Shawky."

As the state superintendent's interpretation of a point makes it law until changed by legislative enactment, all teachers should take due notice and report accordingly.

One of the most timely and impressive addresses made by any one respecting the portentious condition of political affairs now confronting the American people was that made by Prof. Charles W. Dabney at Cincinnati a few days since. With a convincing power to be surpassed by none and and equaled by few if any living teachers and speakers he makes it plain that law without population is a useless desert, and that population without law is a mob, liable at any time to become without control like a fire or a flood and with analogous results, to whatever may be in their way. As Prof. Dabney sees it, "Back to the Land," is about the only thing in evidence that may avert what now seems so near and sadly foreboding, to all that should be dear to our American citizenship.
